Carnera-Sharkey.
A Sad Dinosaur.
Ladies Present.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IF IN ANCIENT Rome you had attended the gladiatorial fights, Emperor looking on, populace pointing its thumbs up or down, all classes represented, you would have a fairly clear idea of Roman civilization.

Seeing through other eyes a modern spectacle in which brutality is the amusement, with men set to fight, you get an idea of our civilization and manners.

In our prize fights, as in other lines, American civilization has achieved "mass production."

Night before last 30,000 men and women went a long way to Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, N. Y., to sit through cold hours of the early night, around a ring with powerful lights overhead that made the fighters visible far away.

AS AT OTHER banquets there were "hors d'oeuvre," minor fights by minor fighters to whet the appetite. In dressing rooms below ground were a dozen such fighters, a majority with rather long noses, usually broken, just below the forehead. Some were "ambitious beginners." Others, described as "punch drunk," their brains jarred so often in prize fights, were headed, probably, for the insane asylum.

The two "great" fighters each had separate rooms, each with half a dozen men to take care of him, winding heavy tape around his knuckles to prevent bones breaking, telling him how great he was, to keep up his morale.

JAMES J. JOHNSTON, who came from Liverpool, was directing the fight, his enterprise. You cannot mistake him, for he is built like Lawrence Barrett, and always wears a black derby hat, and is a philosopher. Says he:

"The last 10 seconds should make a champion."

Young men that get tired easily should remember that.

IN ONE "PRELIMINARY" Mr. Cobb might be the best heavyweight fighter in the world, "if he would take care of himself and train." He fights a Negro. Both weigh above 200 pounds.

The Negro, in a dressing gown of many colors, would have been bought easily by the Queen of Sheba. He smiles and dances, quite happy, for part of a minute. But when that preliminary is over, Cobb lifts him up and carries him to his chair, unconscious. That is over, and the crowd is well pleased.

AT LAST the "big men" come on. One, "Jack Sharkey," from the land that lies along the Baltic Sea, is heavier than the majority of fighting champions. He weighs 203 pounds, is six feet one inch tall. As he stands in the ring, shaking hands with the gigantic Italian Primo Carnera, he looks like a little boy beside his father.

Referee "Gunboat" Smith, whose nose was broken in a classical manner long, long ago, conqueror of many of the best, refuses to make predictions.

"Sharkey can box, he knows how to hit. Carnera has only what God Almighty gave him."

DIVINE GIFTS to Primo Carnera are impressive. Without an ounce of fat, his waist only two inches bigger than that of Sharkey, he weighs 263 pounds, stands near six feet six in height. He inherits a huge body that his ancestors brought down from the north over the Alps into Italy long years ago.

His gentle eyes are a soft brown, and he seems to wonder why "promoters," observing his enormous muscles, decided to make him a prize fighter.

He need not wonder, for James Johnston, wearer of the black derby, says:

"His owners will make a million dollars out of him."

You must know that many prize fighters are "owned" now, as gladiators were owned in Rome.

ABOUT THE FIGHT that lasted 15 rounds, 45 minutes of fighting with a minute of rest between each round, you read yesterday if interested. It was a dull affair, sort of "irresistible force meeting an immovable obstacle!"

Carnera is so tall that Sharkey could reach his face with great difficulty, and confined himself to attacks on the pit of Carnera's stomach, which he battered again and again with terrific power, driving his blows as often as possible on the left side "under the heart," cutting the skin.

IN CARNERA'S corner an intelligent Frenchman, Dr. See, a great athlete in his younger days, directed and did the thinking for the huge man in the ring, calling out over and over, "Avances," meaning "Advance;" "La gauche," meaning "The left hand;" "En ligne," meaning "In line," which meant that he wanted Carnera to stand up properly, sidewise, not exposing himself too much.

Often the Frenchman cried

League Aims to Link U. S. in War

AID SOUGHT IN PEACE EFFORT

International News Service.

Efforts to draw the United States into official participation in the League of Nations efforts to settle the Manchurian dispute occupied the attention of the League Council today.

Washington's reply is awaited, but fear is expressed that Japan may veto the proposal.

In Tokio, the Japanese government reaffirmed its opposition to appointment of a League commision to investigate Manchuria.

Meanwhile, a series of Sino-Japanese clashes occurred in Manchuria. Heavy troop movements of Japanese demoralized passenger train service, and forced two American consular representatives to postpone an investigation trip to Chinchow.

GENEVA, Oct. 14.—The Council of the League of Nations decided late this afternoon to take no decisive steps toward settlement of the threatening Manchurian dispute, pending the outcome of negotiations to bring the United States into full participation in any action it may take.

No formal session of the Council was held today and none will be held until Washington replies and Tokio approves or rejects American participation.

PRESENCE VITAL

Instead members of the Council, excluding China and Japan, held an informal meeting, at which it was agreed America's presence at the Council table is vital for two reasons:

First—Because the weight of America's influence, placed squarely behind the League, is expected to force a peaceful settlemen if one is possible.

Second—Because, should the League fail to prevent war in the Far East, its prestige would be partly saved if the United States shared responsibility for that failure.

CITY ASKED TO SLASH EXPENSES

Building Owners' Group Assails 'Spending' Orgy At End of Each Year

A demand for a check on the orgy of spending in city departments in the last three months of every year which rarely leaves anything but a small surplus in the accounts was made today to City Council by James W. Bamford, speaking for the Building Owners and Managers Association in their campaign for a $5,000,000 reduction in the city budget.

A study of the city's expenditures by months has shown that in the last three months of every year the sums spent have run much higher than in the previous nine months, Bamford declared. He attributed this to an effort by the department heads to justify their budget figures and prevent a surplus in their account which might act to reduce their budget allotment for the next year.

APPEALS FOR SAVING

He declared if this excess spending is curbed, it will result in a tremendous saving to the city. He said:

"We found this practice prevalent in all departments and we feel it should be checked up at once and the practice discontinued."

It was suggested that Council obtain from the Controller's office a record of the unexpended balance in all code accounts for this year and the monthly average for the previous nine months for each of these accounts and notify officials they must not exceed their monthly average. That code accounts calling for spending hundreds of thousands of dollars should check out each year to within a few dollars or a few cents caused the Building Owners and Managers to investigate.

SCHOOL FUND CHECK-UP INCLUDED IN AUDIT

City Treasurer to Attend Opening of Strongbox; Payroll Inquiry Asked

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley was expected at his office late today for opening of a safe which was to disclose whether the city holds bonds as security for $125,000 time deposits in the closed Franklin Savings and Trust Company.

Other developments in the audit of the Treasurer's office by Controller James P. Kerr today were:

1. Kerr announced that the audit includes a check on school funds, collected and deposited by Schooley, as school treasurer.

2. Allegheny County League of Women Voters urged that the probe be extended to the city payroll to determine efficiency of employes and presence at their jobs.

3. Letters were drafted for Schooley's signature asking all city depositories to disclose their records to auditors probing his accounts.

Search for the government bonds exhibited to Controller Kerr by Special Investigator Arthur Burgoyne, of Schooley's office, as those which had been tendered by the Franklin Savings and Trust Company to protect city deposits has so far been fruitless.

DENIAL BY TAYLOR

George F. Taylor, Jr., state banking examiner, in charge of the close bank, denied the bank had given any bonds as security.

Controller Kerr said the audit of the school funds is under way. J. Rodgers McCreery, solicitor of the Board of Public Education, requested that this be done, but Kerr stated he had already authorized it.

Schooley, McCreary explained, collects and deposits school funds in school depositories, but has nothing to do with the bonds put up as security for such deposits.

The school code automatically makes the City Treasurer also School Treasurer and the City Controller, School Controller.

N. R. Criss, chairman of the School Board Committee of Finance, pointed out that at least one irregularity would be uncovered by the audit, one that has

IREY CONFIRMS U. S. QUIZ HERE

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—That agents of the special intelligence unit of the revenue department are at work in Pittsburgh was confirmed today by Capt. Elmer Irey, unit chieftain. He declined to comment, however, upon reports that the income of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh and other Pittsburgh politicians was under scrutiny.

Apparently familiar, however, with Walsh's name and the situation in Pittsburgh, Capt. Irey said the government investigation of unpaid income tax is proceeding all over the country. Irey is here for the Capone trial.

The rumor that Supt. Walsh's banking activities were being probed by the government was revived in Pittsburgh recently after having lain dormant since early in the summer when reports had it that a special federal grand jury would be called in September to probe the income tax returns of Mayor Charles H. Kline and other political heads.

Hoover to Open Relief Drive Sunday; Young Asks Charity Football

President Ready To Make Fund Appeal on Air

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—President Hoover will deliver a radio address Sunday night from Fortress Monroe, Va., helping to open the drive of his emergency unemployment committee for relief funds for local communities.

He leaves here Saturday for Annapolis, where he will embark on the U. S. S. Arkansas to take part in the Yorktown sesquicentennial celebration.

To co-operate with the committee headed by Walter S. Gifford, he will direct the battleship to put in at Fortress Monroe. He will go to the home of the commandant at the old fortress.

The address will be given there some time between 6 and 6:30 Sunday night.

All U. S. Colleges Urged to Play Benefit Games

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—A trumpet call to college and school football to hit the line for the unemployed was sounded today by Owen D. Young.

The chairman of President Hoover's committee on mobilization of relief resources appealed to every college and school in the land to play at least one game for the jobless.

Rallying officials, players and students to the cause, the electrical magnate disclosed that the nation-wide drive to have college and school elevens roll up a golden barrage against want is already under way.

He pointed to the decision of the Big Ten of the Western Conference to play post season benefit games and to the recently scheduled Army-Navy game as cases in point.

Mr. Young's call urged that where the gross proceeds, less actual expenses, of at least one regularly scheduled game this fall cannot be turned over to the local emergency funds, special games bs scheduled. He emphasized a hope that the games may be student activites throughout, adding:

"This is about the only kind of thing which the students of our schools and colleges can do to aid in the work which so many thousands of our citizens are volunteering to undertake. The precedent of responding to the President's call in a national emergency is a good one, and ordinary rules should give way in the face of it."

The receipts will be turned over to local relief funds being raised by communities throughout the country.

CAPONE LOSSES TOLD TO JURY

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Alphonse Capone today opened his fight for acquittal on charges of evading income taxes with an account of his gambling losses.

The husky gang leader is a poor judge of race horses, the jury in United States Circuit Court was told today.

Milton Held, a bookmaker, testified:

"He won some bets, but not very many."

Held, although he had no records to prove it, and could remember no individual transactions, estimated that Capone lost between $8,000 and $10,000 during the summer meeting at the Hawthorne race track in 1924 and about $12,000 in the fall of 1925 at the same track.

The government closed its case yesterday.

Mine Region Waif 'Adopts' Phila. Mayor as 'Dad'

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Fourteen-year-old Eugene Victor McGeorge, who has "adopted" Mayor Harry A. Mackey as his father, thinks the Mayor is "a swell guy," he said today.

The Mayor has accepted the responsibility and is arranging to send the boy to a trade school.

Young McGeorge came from his home in Montrose, Pa., last Sunday, and convinced the Mayor that he should "adopt" Mr. Mackey as his foster father. The boy's father has agreed and young McGeorge is now living with Mrs. Lorna Mackey Haines, the Mayor's daughter, at Mackey's West Philadelphia home. The boy met the Mayor seven years ago at Montrose.

The lad said he was willing to go to a trade school. He said:

"I don't know what kind of a mechanic I'll be, but I want to fool around with machinery."

The Mayor commented:

"Yes, I'm going to keep him. He's a fine boy. He has spirit and I know I'll be proud of him."

The boy had told the Mayor that he had decided if he was "ever going to get anywhere" now was "a good time to start."

Life Battle to Reach 106 Lost by Few Hours

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Mary Wisniewski's month-long battle to hold to a slipping life until she becomes 106 years of age ended last night—less than 26 hours from the goal.

For 76 years Mrs. Wisniewski had been a resident of Everson, near here. Every day during that time she had attended church and throughout her life, until six weeks ago, she had enjoyed the best of health. Then blood poisoning developed from a minor injury. A month ago physicians gave up hope for her recovery.

But one thought spurred her on—to live until she was 106. For the last month she has been cared for by neighbors and by the Everson troop of Boy Scouts, which adopted her two years ago. Even their tender care was unavailing and at 11:40 last night she died. Tomorrow she would have been 106.

She is survived by one son. He is 70, born six years after his mother came to Everson from Poland.

GOV. HUEY LONG RESISTS OUSTER MOVE WITH TROOPS

MILITIA IGNORES CYR'S ORDER TO DISBAND

'Two Governors' Battle For Authority; Courts Asked to Take Hand

International News Service.

BATON ROUGE, La., Oct. 14.—Amid an atmosphere of extreme tension, armed members of the militia and highway police guarded the state Capitol and Governor's mansion today as Gov. Huey P. Long and Lieut. Gov. Paul Cyr came to grips in their long-standing political feud.

Despite Cyr's action in having himself sworn in as Governor of the state, Gov. Long today remained in possession of the administration. The state troops continued under his command, pending the arrival from Atlanta of Adjutant Gen. Fleming.

Protected by the armed sentinels Gov. Long's administration appointees engaged in occupation of the offices in the government building. The troopers and highway police were under orders to resist any positive attempt on the part of Cyr's appointees to assume possession of the office.

MAY SHIFT TO COURTS

Meanwhile, it appeared likely that the battleground in Louisiana's civil war may shift to the state's courts. It was understood Cyr is preparing to file mandamus or quo warranto proceedings against Long. Shortly after he took the gubernatorial oath at Shreveport, Cyr announced he would file suit to have Long dismissed from the Governor's office.

Ever since Gov. Long's election to the United States Senate was certified, Cyr has contended that the Governor's seat was vacant and has threatened to take possession of the office. Long, however, continued to discharge the functions of the Governor, declaring that he belongs constitutionally in that office until he is actually sworn in as a Senator.

CALLS OUT TROOPS

Gov. Long was in New Orleans when Cyr took the oath of office at Shreveport. Learning of this action, the Governor declared the office of Lieutenant Governor vacant and issued an order calling upon Senator Alvin O. King to assume Cyr's place.

He then motored to Baton Rouge where he ordered out the local units of the state militia and advised Adj. Gen. Fleming to return from Atlanta.

Cyr immediately signed a gubernatorial decree ordering the troops to disband. The soldiers, however, remained on duty, awaiting the command of Gen. Fleming.

been common to all School Treasurers for 15 years, he asserted.

Instead of placing school funds immediately in school depositories, as required by law, Criss stated the treasurer puts the money in a city depository at the close of each day's business and later distributes it. The school board has contended against this practice for years, he declared, without avail. The treasurer holds he cannot distribute the money the same day it is received, according to Criss.

KERR COMMENDED

The Allegheny County League of Women Voters, meeting in the Congress of Women's Clubs, today adopted a resolution commending Kerr for the audit and urging that it be extended to include the city payroll, duties of workers, their efficiency and time spent on the job.

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, president, declared:

"Let us have an audit of the payroll and clean things up. If we can do this, Pittsburgh will be a better place for all of us to live in."

Referring to the audit of the affairs in the city treasury, she said:

"Apparently delinquent taxes come under an entirely different category. Why should he (Schooley), have had $165,000 deposited in a bank without the protection that city funds are entitled to."

Mrs. Smith said she thought the city could be run on a 5 mill reduction in taxes and run more efficiently than now.

Letters drafted by Schooley's secretary were awaiting his signature today, to all city depositories, requesting that they permit access to safety deposit vaults containing security for city time deposits. The letter:

"This will be your authority to permit Mr. Robert Torrence to open a safety deposit box in your bank containing security pledged to secure time deposits of city funds.

"The purpose of this visit is to permit the Controller or his authorized representatives to list and check this security."

Schooley is under fire from the state in a suit filed by Taylor yesterday, asking $10,000 and interest from September 4 for a promissory note signed by Schooley as president of the Pitt Hockey Club Inc., and indorsed by Herman Friedman, well known as a Kline political supporter.

The note, Taylor alleges, was security for a $9,800 N. S. F. check signed by Schooley on the Franklin Bank when he had $8.03 in his account.

CHECK, NOTE MISSING

The check and the note disappeared from the bank Monday. With theft suspected, five employes of Taylor's who had worked for the bank before its failure were summarily discharged.

The county, through the District Attorney's office, is interested in indictable irregularities in Schooley's conduct of the office, if any are found.

The city, through Dr. Kerr, is conducting a thorough audit of the department, started, it is believed, when rumors spread that $7,500 was taken from the office to prop a sinking "numbers" pool in East Liberty.

Reports that Schooley has hired H. D. Hirsh, attorney for the Pool Voting Machine Company and for the Public Service Commission, as his attorney could not be confirmed. Hirsh refused to comment, although he is known to have transacted other business for the Treasurer.

Schooley has been ill with anemia since late September. He was expected to make his first appearance at his office today, when Kerr opened the safe.

Possibility that Taylor may move to attach the bonds, if they were personally pledged by former officers or directors of the bank, was seen today. In his letter to Kerr and Schooley yesterday, forbidding disposal of the bonds, Taylor said:

"The secretary in possession has not sufficient time to thoroughly investigate and consequently to satisfy himself that any securities that might be be pledged cannot be claimed as being general assets for the depositors of the closed institution."

Allegheny County's purchase of the Wabash bridge and tunnel from the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad, at a price approximating $3,000,000, was approved by Judge James H. Gray in Quarter Sessions Court today.

Gray's action was taken on recommendation of the grand jury, which had studied the County Commissioners' petition for approval.

If no exceptions are filed, the ruling will become final in 10 days.

The bridge and tunnel are to be used as a vehicular link between the South Hills and downtown, in an effort to relieve traffic congestion in the Liberty Tubes.

LABOR RENEWS DEMAND FOR 2.75 BEER

Two Resolutions Offered At Vancouver Convention; Jobless Relief Considered

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 14.—(AP.)—After being kicked around more than a week in committee rooms and corridors, the prohibition question crowded its way into the American Federation of Labor convention hall here today.

A resolutions committee, asserting it was promoting the cause of true temperance, asked the convention to adhere to labor's stand of several years for beer of 2.75 per cent alcoholic content.

TWO RESOLUTIONS

At the same time two resolutions, one backed by the remains of the pre-prohibition bartenders' union, and the other by the Tacoma Central Labor Council, asked repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.

Matthew Woll, vice president and chairman of the resolutions committee, said he had not heard half a dozen voices raised against the 2.75 per cent idea.

Throughout the convention the recommendations of the executive council have been almost unanimously followed and the council favors 2.75 per cent beer.

Relief of the unemployment situation overshadowed all other resolutions pending, but there was no controversy in the convention as to the merits of resolutions affecting unemployment. Many suggestions were advanced by the executive council and approved in the resolutions committee report prepared for submission today.

EMERGENCY RELIEF

For emergency relief, the report favored maintenance of wages, shorter work hours, employment assurance, employers taking on additional workers, creation of work through public undertakings, strengthening of employment agencies; no child labor; preference for workers with dependents, and financial relief from public and private funds.

For permanent relief, the Federation asks national planning to balance supply and demand; public accounting; a federal labor board to collect data; organization of workers in trades unions; a federal employment service; vocational retraining, so that workers in stagnant trades could be taught to do work more often in demand, and job security.

liberations, urged upon Kenichi Yoshisawa the necessity of American participation in a private conversation this morning.

CONFERS WITH GILBERT

Briand also conferred with Prentiss Gilbert, American consul in Geneva, who has been delegated by Secretary of State Stimson to take part in the Sino-Japanese discussions as the representative of the United States.

Neither Briand nor Gilbert would discuss their conversation, but it was understood that Gilbert had made a report to Washington by cable to advise Secretary Stimson of the latest developments and to request the attitude of the Washington government.

A formal meeting of the Council was expected to be held late this afternoon, when Briand hoped to have a reply to Gilbert's message to Washington, enabling him to announce that the United States would be represented.

All members of the Council recognize the situation with respect to American participation requires most delicate handling to avoid wounding Japanese feelings. There is no precedent for inviting a power not a member of the league to participate even informally in Council deliberations of such an important character.

Chinese in Mukden Area Shot Down by Japanese

By EDWARD HUNTER

International News Service.

MUKDEN, Oct. 14.—Seven Chinese were killed today in a sharp encounter between Japanese troops and a band of 300 Chinese near the Liao River, 30 miles outside of Mukden.

The Japanese soldiers were part of a punitive expedition dispatched from Mukden in what was officially termed an "anti-bandit" crusade.

Heavy Japanese troop movements out of Mukden completely disrupted regular train service, forcing George Hanson and Laurence Salisbury, American consular officials makings an inspection of the "war area," to postpone their scheduled departure for Chinchow, headquarters of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, which have twice been bombed by Japanese airplanes.

creasing tax burden, Bamford asserted. He said:

"We have long passed the point where we can come to you in a spirit of co-operation and friendliness because we have found our co-operative efforts have not produced results."

A saving of $100,000 a year can be made in the operation of the City-County Building, he declared. City departments are overmanned with inefficient overpaid employes, who have been put on the payroll merely because of political connections or to repay political debts, Bamford said.

Council has delayed action on the city market houses for two years, although remedies have been plainly shown, the speaker said. He called attention to the savings made recently through the checking of the revenues at the wharf parking stations.

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, representative of the League of Women Voters, attended the tax reduction hearing and announced that she would bend her efforts toward forcing the $5,000,000 reduction advocated by the Building Owners and Managers.

J. R. Brady, representing the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, today advocated the city taking steps to obtain a refund of a share of the money it contributes each year to the state gasoline tax.

Citing the large amount of gasoline consumed by Pittsburgh motorists each year, Brady said such a step would materially reduce city taxation.

ZAMORA QUITS AS PRESIDENT OF SPAIN

Vote to Separate Church And State Brings Crisis; Jesuit Order Expelled

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA

International News Service.

MADRID, Oct. 14.—In protest against the anti-Catholic attitude of the constituent Cortes, President Nicete Alcala Zamora and the entire cabinet of the new Spanish Republic resigned today.

Zamora's resignation followed a stormy all-night session of the Cortes, during which an article in the proposed federal constitution separating church and state was passed, as well as several other articles, including one providing for the expulsion of the Jesuits.

Because of the strong anti-Catholic attitude of the Socialists, Zamora submitted his resignation last week, and for one hour the country was without a president. He reconsidered, however, and withdrew his resignation at that time, but warned that continuance of the anti-religious activity in the Cortes would result in his complete withdrawal from office.

Zamora's resignation was handed to the Cortes after he had delivered a lengthy exhortation urging the deputies to refrain from too drastic anti-religious measures. The Cortes disregarded the president's plea and passed the articles expelling the Jesuit order and separating church and state.

Another articles, however, providing for dissolution of all church orders was rejected by the Cortes.

TURMOIL GRIPS REICHSTAG

By EDWARD L. DEUSS

International News Service.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—With the Reichstag in a continual state of turmoil, party leaders presented their platforms to Germany's Parliament today.

The National Socialist (Fascist) group, under the leadership of Adolf Hitler, was among the first to lay its plans for the Reich's rehabiliation before the deputies. Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, bolstered by the unqualified support of President von Hindenburg, marched out of the chamber when Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior of the state of Brunswick and a "Nazi" leader, mounted the rostrum to present the Fascist platform.

Following the Chancellor's example, the Fascist then marched out in a body the moment Dr. Frick had completed his address and Herr Remmele, Communist leader and the Nazi's "arch enemy," began presentation of his platform.

U. S. Drive to Keep Russia In World War Revealed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—An American-conceived and American directed campaign of propaganda failed in 1917 to rekindle Russia's dissipated war fervor and the Allies lost a powerful aide.

Details of America's effort to keep Russia in the World War, following the fall of the czarist regime in March, 1917, were revealed by the State Department with publication of the report of the special mission to Russia headed by Elihu Root.

As shown in the heretofore unpublished correspondence, the Root commission and David R. Francis, then ambassador to Russia, held strong hopes of keeping alive Russia's war spirits by means of American financial support. Through a propaganda campaign they planned to bolster the enthusiasm of the population. Widespread diffusion of pamphlets, motion pictures and advertising were recommended and subsequently inaugurated.

The commission, apparently, failed to sense the magnitude of the then impending Bolshevist movement which, before the beginning of 1918, overthrew the Kerensky provisional government and later concluded a separate peace treaty with Germany.

Even in 1918 Ambassador Francis regarded the Soviet government as "only a shell." The publication reveals the celerity with which the Wilson administration recognized the provisional government of March, 1917. Also, it is shown that while President Wilson did not recognize the Soviet, his Ambassador, with approval of the State Department, maintained informal relations with the Bolshevik authorities.

Ambassador Francis identified Lenin as "an extreme Socialist or Anarchist." He added that Lenin probably would be deported shortly.

MAN JAILED AS OWNER OF DEATH CAR IN TORCH MURDER

KIN OF VICTIM, CHILD BRIDE MISSING

Disappearance of Girl and Husband Deepens Mystery In Two Racket Slayings

Mike Mendeno, 32, of 1913 Vickeroy street, was arrested today in connection with the beer supply racket killings of Jack Palmere and Sam (Toto) Amarosa, partners in a chain of moonshine stills and in the yeast and sugar brewery trade.

His arrest by homicide detectives came while they were seeking George Caffara, Toto's cousin, and his pretty 15-year-old bride, both of whom disappearede after the killings.

CAR FOUND ABANDONED

Mendeno, the detectives said, is the owner of the automobile in which Amarosa was taken for his last ride and left wrapped in a blazing, gasoline-soaked blanket at the end of a lonely country road.

The car, purchased by Amarosa, was registered in Mendeno's name, the officers said. He was arrested the day after the killing and admitted, police declared, being employed by Amarosa and Palmere as a truck driver, but denied connection with or knowledge of the slayings.

The automobile was located yesterday, abandoned in Milltown, Plum Township.

BELIEVED LURED AWAY

In spite of the fact that Elizabeth's mother revealed no concern at her daughter's disappearance, detectives were inclined to believe she was lured away.

Prying deeper into Caffara's affairs, detectives learned that the confectioner had been arrested when he arrived in New York recently for his honeymoon. Details of the arrest will be learned today.

Meanwhile, according to Dodson, a move for the indictment of "Little Joe" Spinelli, partner of Palmere and Toto, who is being sought by detectives, will be made today.

ATTORNEY ENDS LIFE AT RESORT

The death of Blythe S. Weddell, 34, Pittsburgh attorney, whose body was found in his Conneaut Lake cottage yesterday, was listed today as a suicide by Coroner W. E. Byham who investigated the case. Attorney Weddell lived on Beechwood boulevard, Squirrel Hill, and had offices in the Frick building.

Two Pittsburgh friends who visited the cottage yesterday discovered the body in a room filled with fumes. Investigation by the coroner revealed that Weddell had driven his automobile close to the cottage, attached a hose to the exhaust pipe and extended the hose through a window into the cottage.

The friends of the dead man told Coroner Byham that Weddell had gone to Conneaut Lake Monday to close the cottage for the winter. Before he left Pittsburgh he had invited them to visit the cottage on Tuesday. A physician who examined the attorney's body said he had been dead from 12 to 15 hours and that death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

CIVILIZATION'S FALL SEEN BY H. G. WELLS

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Foreseeing the end of the depression in the collapse of civilization, H. G. Wells, British novelist and historian, arrived on the Cunard liner Aquitania last night to survey the world's problems in this hemisphere.

Wells likened the present civilization to "a tremendously crazy edifice," which is likely to fall if the causes of the present unrest are not discovered and remedied. The possibility of a remedy, he added, is feeble since the factors responsible for the financial crash of 1929 are still active.

Civilization's fall would be far greater and more terrible than the collapse of the Grecian and Roman cultures, the historian declared. Asked in what state the world would find itself, he answered laughingly:

"I'll write you a book about that."

Wells comes to the United States primarily to correct the proofs of his new book, "Work, Wealth and Happiness of Mankind," a companion volume of his famous "Outline of History." The weakness of his throat will prevent him from lecturing.

He admitted, however, that he will probably "succumb" to the urging of Mrs. Margaret Sanger to speak at one of her birth control gatherings. Asked what effect birth control might have in remedying the world's troubles, he said:

"It may avert disaster later on. But it won't help in the next five years. And that is what we are concerned about now."

Wells said there was considerable danger of an outbreak of war, but it would not begin in the same manner as the last, "since history never repeats itself," he added:

"It is likely to begin by localized fighting, such as we see in the Far East today. If that fire is not controlled, it is in danger of spreading."

This, according to the declaration, resulted in their home being broken up and destroyed, and caused him and his wife to become separated.

KANE TO MISS ART EXHIBIT; RIB BROKEN

Strip House Painter Who Crashed Big Show Will Have Picture on View

John Kane, Strip house painter, who so spectacularly slipped into the realms of art, will be missing from the crowd at Carnegie Institute tonight for the press view of the International Art Exhibit. He is in St. Francis Hospital with a broken rib.

Tall, gaunt, shy, with ambling gait and warm smile, for the last six years he has stood out among the sleek men, elegant dowagers and smart debs—those who, with artists and newspapermen, form the press night throng. He is represented, however, with "Monongahela Valley," a typical painting, simple, primitive in effect, showing the mills in the valley of the Monongahela River.

Kane some months ago fell from a street car and injured several ribs. They healed slowly—he is over 60 years. Two weeks ago he slipped in his home and the fall caused another crack. He ignored the pain at first, but it became necessary for him to enter the institution for treatment.

RESCUER FOILS RIVER SUICIDE

Harry Eisele, 23-year-old crack speed swimmer of the McKeesport "Y," is a hero today.

Unable to revive Wiskoski with an inhalator, police took him to McKeesport Hospital where he did not regain consciousness until this morning. Wiskoski, hospital authorities said, refused to give a reason for his act.

Modestly making light of his effort, Eisele, who lives at 327 Locust street, McKeesport, said he leaped into the water when several in the crowd of spectators informed him a man had jumped into the river. He said:

"I like to swim, so I jumped in."

PART OF FUNDS MISSING, SAYS RICH RECLUSE

Under-Nourished Widow, 93, Worried at Delving Into $1,000,000 Room Hoard

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Just as soon as her ankles get better, Mrs. Ida Wood intends to "go out and look for the rest of my money."

The folds of her old-fashioned gowns and hiding places in her hotel room already have yielded a fortune in currency and bonds—nearly a million dollars. The 76-pound, 93-year-old lady insists, however, that there is more.

Her ankle weakness, physicians said, is due to lack of nutrition during the months she lived frugally in her simple quarters with bundles of $10,000 banknotes, diamonds and other costly jewels within arm's reach.

ONE EGG AT TIME

Mrs. Wood, after years of living on such a slender budget as to call for the purchase of a single egg at a time, would be dismayed at the amount already expended in her behalf since the court has taken over her affairs.

Bills filed with the court and approved, it was reported today, include a physician's fee of $3,800, and $7,900 to a detective agency, which has maintained guards at the hotel since last March.

The bond of Mrs. Wood's guardian, Otis Wood, was raised from $225,000 to $1,000,000 yesterday after other claimants to relationship had filed protests. Wood is a nephew. The opposing faction is headed by Mrs. William C. Shields, a step-granddaughter.

NECKLACE MISSING

Five trunks belonging to Mrs. Wood were opened yesterday, and another small fortune in gems was found. There were watches set with rose diamonds, rare necklaces and heavy bracelets.

The most valuable jewelry of all—the diamond necklace Mrs. Wood wore at the Infanta Eulalia ball in Madison Square Garden in 1893—has not been found. Other trunks remain to be opened, and it may be in one of them; or it may be that it is concealed in some unfound cache.

FOE OF HOOVER WINS IN WEST

RACINE, Wis., Oct. 14.—(AP.)—An anti-Hoover Progressive Republican, Thomas R. Amlie, Elkhorn attorney, yesterday was elected by First Wisconsin District voters to fill the unexpired term of the late Representative Henry Allen Cooper, "dean of the House."

With all but two of the 200 precincts reporting, unofficial returns gave Amlie 14,295 votes. His closest rival, A. J. Bouma, Racine, upset political forecasts to get 7,241 ballots, the largest number ever given a Socialist candidate in the normally conservative Republican district.

Amlie, supported by the Progressive Republicans, made attacks against the Eighteenth Amendment, the Republican tariff and handling of the unemployment problem.

MT. UNION, Pa., Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Naomi Pearl Long, 30, wife of Marvin E. Long, was shot and killed yesterday by a neighbor, Martin Gearhart, 35. Gearhart was quoted by police as admitting the shooting but saying he didn't know why.

Wife to Quit Home Holding Yacht Murder Memories

By CHARLES J. McGUIRK

International News Service.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 14.—As the tumult and the shouting die down after the murder of her husband, Benjamin P. Collings, aboard his yacht, the Penguin, in Long Island Sound on the night of September 9 last, Mrs. Lillian Collings today prepared to go away from here and begin life anew.

Some day this week she will lock up the big brown house, which sets amid an orchard of Baldwin apple trees and which has seen all the happiness of her married life and the birth of her baby, and will go to Dorchester, Mass.

There, in a wooden house which rests 11 feet above the roadway, she and her child, Barbara, will join her father, Herman P. Chelius, composer, and her two maiden aunts, Anne and Rose Chelius.

What she will do then is problematical. Neither Mrs. Collings nor her attorney, Judge William A. Kelly, of Stamford, are communicative. Her assets, however, consist of the ownership of the house here, the sum of $5,000 so invested that at the present moment it brings in an annual income of $340, and the ill-fated cruiser, the Penguin.

'Beauties' Are Not Dumb; Just One of Many Fallacies

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Beautiful women are not dumb. Minister's sons usually don't go wrong. Brilliant persons are not subject to nervous breakdowns.

If you disagree with any of these assertions you are merely one of the millions in America who have been deceived by popular fallacies, Albert Edward Wiggam, author, said yesterday in an address.

The belief that gazing at the back of a person's head makes him turn around, that there is such a thing as an undertow in a body of water, and that you can read a man's character by looking into his face also were listed by him as additional notions which have no basis in fact. He said:

"It has been proved conclusively that a man's character has nothing to do with his face. On a recent occasion 88 such character readers were asked to judge a group of college students, male and female. All the subjects were clad alike. Only three of the 88 experts could tell which was a young man and which was a young woman. And every one of them disagreed on what characters the faces showed."

HUGE SHIPPING POOL FORMED

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—(Universal)—The biggest shipping combine in the world today awaited approval of the United States Shipping Board.

A series of conferences held here the last week culminated in a tentative agreement being reached last night for the joint operation of the United States Lines by the Dollar-Dawson-Chapman interests of the Pacific Coast and the International Mercantile Marine and Roosevelt Lines of the Atlantic.

Revenues derived from the joint operation will be pooled.

Approval of the United States Shipping Board will be sought at once.

One outstanding effect it was pointed out, will be to place the American Merchant Marine in its long-sought place of leadership on the high seas.

Rumors that the deal involved a merger of the Dollar-Dawson-Chapman interests with the International Mercantile Marine and Roosevelt Lines were emphatically denied.

FRENCH MOTOR KING IN U. S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Andre Citroen, the "Henry Ford of France," arrived yesterday for a visit in the United States and described business in France as "pretty good." He said:

"Our automobile factories are running at 90 per cent of the 1929 peak. Although our export markets in Germany and England have been somewhat affected by conditions there, we retain our best markets, Belgium, Poland and Scandinavian countries."

He attributed the comparative prosperity in France partly to the fact that its agricultural prices are maintained by protection.

Cuban Gunboats Out In New Revolt Fear

HAVANA, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Gunboats were patroling the north coast of Cuba because of reports that two sailboats of "doubtful character" had sailed from Nassau, Bahama Islands.

DOOMED WOMAN WINS RETRIAL

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 14.—(AP)—Mrs. Maud Lowther was granted a new trial late yesterday by the District Court of Appeals here on her appeal from a death sentence imposed for the slaying of Mrs. Tilby Smith this spring at Ashtabula. The court, in granting her appeal, found the trial court erred in impaneling the jury.

Mrs. Lowther was charged with conspiring with Tilby Smith to murder his wife. She and Smith were tried and convicted. Smith's appeal for a new trial was denied and his case was taken to the State Supreme Court, where it still is pending.

Both Mrs. Lowther and Smith were sentenced to the electric chair and were to have been electrocuted this month. Both, however, received stays of execution pending disposition of their appeals.

AIRCRAFT LIGHT EXPERTS' TOPIC

Progress of aviation lighting held the attention of the Illuminating Engineering Society today with national authorities speaking before the silver anniversary convention in the William Penn Hotel.

That lights have served an important part in the progress of night flying was stressed by the speakers. The penetration of fog is the only obstacle illuminating engineers thus far have failed to accomplish with light.

A golf tournament at the St. Clair Country Club featured the afternoon, reserved for social events. A sightseeing trip for members and women visitors was to include inspection tours of the American Window Glass Company plant, Arnold and the Aluminum Company of America, New Kensington.

Speakers on aviation lighting on the morning session program were K. W. Mackall, of Syracuse; D. C. Young, Cleveland; R. W. Cost, Bloomfield, N. J., and F. C. Breckenridge, Washington.

HUSBAND OF 5 CONVICTED

ATLANTA, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Calvin H. Burke, 54-year-old Texan, who, the government charged, married five women in 12 months and swindled them out of money, bonds and jewelry, was sentenced to five years in Atlanta Penitentiary on a mail fraud charge yesterday.

The five women came to court to testify against him and chatted gaily at their first meeting.

Burke, described by the prosecutor as a man who was respected in his home town near Dallas, but who "went gallivanting around the country marrying unsuspecting women and stealing their savings," threw himself on the mercy of the court.

The wives said they met Burke through the "American Friendship society," of Detroit, Mich., mentioned in connection with the West Virginia "Bluebeard" killings laid to Harry F. Powers.

"Up!" suggesting that Carnera uppercut Sharkey.

THOUSANDS SITTING in the dark around the lighted ring did not like that "En ligne," etc. There was something suspicious about talking French at an honest prize fight, but they endured it.

Occasionally, when attacks "downstairs" compelled the Italian giant to lower his arms, Sharkey reached up and struck powerful blows in his face. He closed the Italian's right eye, and in the fourth round, to the amazement of everybody, including himself, he knocked the boxer down.

CARNERA SLOWLY rose while Gunboat Smith counted toward 10, seeming bewildered and offended. He was not made for that work, but for the heavy work that he did about a hotel until the "promoters" discovered him, the heavy work that made him muscle-bound. He might lift a ton, but he cannot strike a hard blow.

Sharkey, who hit with terrific strength, as he danced before the taller man, his light blue gray eyes blazing hatred, into the soft brown eyes of the Italian, seemed like some carnivorous animal, of an earlier day, attacking a defenseless dinosaur.

THERE WERE human beings of all kinds around that ring except one kind. Men were in the majority, with some women. One woman with a big mouth made more hideous by red paint, constantly screeched:

"Kill him, Jack!"

One weazened female, of the little kind with a sharp face, half way between a bacchante and a moron, constantly urged Carnera to kill Sharkey. Carnera could not oblige.

SHARKEY WON the battle of course, and will now fight Schmeling, the German, who holds the world's championship largely because the Irish-American breed of fighter seems to have died out.

HELD IN CRASH; WORE PAJAMAS

Clad in black and white pajamas, a woman who said she was Mrs. Jennie Fiske, 27, of 813 St. James street, was arrested early this morning after an automobile she was driving collided with a meat wagon in front of the Hotel Henry coffee shop, Oliver avenue.

Her companion, James McNeillis, 42, "City," also was arrested. Both were held without bail for a Traffic Court hearing tomorrow.

According to police, Mrs. Fiske and McNeillis said they had attended a late party and had driven to town for cigarets when the accident occurred at 8:30 a. m.

The automobile knocked the meat wagon into an electric light pole, which broke and crashed against the coffee shop, breaking three windows.

Mrs. Fiske said she owned the automobile, which bore a New York license; police said, but could produce neither driver's nor owner's card.

She told Patrolman Joseph Loeffler that she lost control of the car due to the wet street.

2 DRIVERS HELD IN AUTO DEATHS

Clement Garrahan, 21, of 15 Admiral Dewey avenue, Ingram, was held for the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter today at a Coroner's inquest into the deaths of Andrew Irvine, 35, his daughter, Margery, 9, of 2736 Stafford street, Sheraden, and Edward J. Mitsch, 34, of 2948 Sacramento street, Sheraden.

They were killed and six others injured when cars driven by Mitsch and Garrahan collided in the Steubenville pike near Baldwin road, September 9.

The Coroner's jury also held Alderich Keelin, of Powers avenue and River road, Oakmont, for the grand jury on a manslaughter charge as a result of the death of Phillip Grena, 68, 7542 Rosslyn street, Swissvale. Grena was struck, police said, by Keelin's car at Woodstock and Ardmore streets, September 10, dying three days later.

6 Clairton Bandits Evade Police Net

Police and county detectives today were seeking six armed bandits who invaded a coffee shop in Maple avenue, Clairton, early yesterday and, after threatening a score of patrons, escaped with $1,500 in cash and several diamond rings. Charles Reza, proprietor, was fired upon by one of the men after he reached for a pistol in the hands of the leader.

BENEFITS SEEN IN JUNK HEAPS

Junk heaps of scrap iron and steel are not so much scenic eyesores as they are milestones in the progress of conservation of natural resources, Dr. Julius Klein, assistant United States secretary of commerce, told directors of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, which closes its convention today in the William Penn Hotel.

The sessions, in progress three days, were devoted to study of industrial conditions. A banquet tonight will close the meeting.

Citing the importance of salvaging iron and steel, Dr. Klein last night declared:

"Were it not for the increasing use of iron and steel and the systematized operations of the scrap iron industry, the drain on the iron ore reserves of the nation would undoubtedly have run into hundreds of millions of tons within the past decade. The iron ore veins of the country are by no means inexhaustible."

OLD HOSPITAL OFFERED CITY

City Council today was offered the old St. Margaret's Hospital to be used as a municipal medical institution. The offer was made by the board of trustees. Price of the institution was not divulged. St. Margaret's is now erecting a new building.

Council also has an offer to buy the Home of the Good Shepherd, Lincoln avenue, as an institution for treatment of social diseases. The home may be purchased for $250,000. At a recent hearing before the Councilmanic Hearings Committee the Lincoln District Board of Trade protested the city's purchase of the site on grounds that use of such a hospital would lower property values. Council held the offer under advisement.

Council also has received a communication from the Exchange Club of Pittsburgh that immediate steps be taken to acquire such a hospital. The petition is signed by nearly a hundred members and associates of the organization.

BENCH VICTORS THANK VOTERS

The present judges of Common Pleas Court, nominated in the Republican primary September 15 Attorney Joseph H. Bialas, chairman of the lawyers' committee promoting their candidacies, have issued a statement thanking voters for their support.

The nominees are Judges Ambrose B. Reid, Samuel H. Gardner, Sylvester J. Snee, W. Heber Dithrich, William H. McNaugher and John P. Egan. The statement read:

"In a campaign marked by the intensity and cross purposes which featured this campaign, such a result is a remarkable testimonial. The judges wish me to state that they regard their victories more as testimonials to the high character and work done by the entire Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County than as personal victories."

An Extraordinary Presentation of ORIENTAL NOVELTIES

Exclusive Importations

The first and big thing that will strike you is that they are highly useful things, pleasing to the eye, and the colors and shapes fit gracefully and harmoniously into the present-day scheme of things. This is because they are our own direct importations from China and Japan, and we chose them with American homes and American purposes fully in mind. The small prices will amaze you.

Sale Squares on the Main Floor, West Building, are being used for this sale tomorrow. There are literally thousands of pieces, embracing such useful articles as:

Incense Burners	Bells
Ash Trays	Match Boxes
Cigarette Boxes	Paper Knives
Preference Chests	Tobacco Jars
Vases	Bowls
Urns	Smoking Sets
Trays	Bronze Animals
Candlesticks	Ash Tray Nests

The materials are brass, cloisonne, antimony, lacquer, amber, bronze and cinnabar. At their low prices they are well nigh irresistible—

35c to $15

It is an occasion not only for connoisseurs and hostesses who delight in favors and prizes of an unusual character, but also for early Christmas shoppers who would choose unduplicatable gifts at very low prices.

With the memory of the beautiful Oriental operetta, which opened at the Nixon Theater last week, still fresh in our minds, we may truthfully say that "East Wind" wafts good fortune to Pittsburgh this week.

Always Something New in Wool Sheers

This sheer wool vogue is a kaleidoscopic thing, in the Women's Wool Sheer Section, as it delightfully changes from week to week, sometimes from day to day.

The very newest models concentrate on the following features: Amazing Sleeves—balloon sleeves, modernized leg-o-mutton sleeves, scalloped sleeves, fagoted sleeves, sleeves with novelty cuffs . . . Colors—effectively combining two shades of the same color, such as light and dark aster and light and dark green . . . Skirts—employing the new vertical line, ending in pleats at the bottom.

Good Clothes

at $22.50

You can buy plenty of inferior clothes, if you wish, from $5 up. But the good kind of suits and topcoats that Richman Brothers make are still underpriced at $22.50.

Rome wasn't built in a day, and neither are clothing values. It took us 52 years and the most intensive specialization that the world has ever seen to reach the top in value giving.

You can put your clothes money into overnight sensations if you wish . . . but we certainly wouldn't advise you to.

Richman Brothers isn't a clothing business in the ordinary sense of the word. It is a partnership between you and our employees and us . . . . each sharing the benefits of mass buying, big production and large scale selling . . . from factory to you . . . without profits to any middlemen.

Whether you dress quietly and conservatively or smartly and fashionably, you'll find a fabric and a model in our new Fall Suits and Topcoats that will be sure to appeal to you.

QUERIES ABOUT KOMIC CLUB POUR IN

Letters and Applications Swamp Secretaries But Will Get Prompt Attention

So many letters are coming in from boys and girls asking for information about the Warner Theater-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club that the secretary with a big force of special assistants is away behind on answering them.

And the applications for membership have swamped the secretary. Club buttons and membership cards are going into the mail by the hundred every day. If you sent in an application and have not received your credentials don't worry. Your application will be cared for in a day or two.

Here's a letter from twins:

"I stay with my grandma and we are twins, eight years old. Please enroll us in the Junior Komic Club. Address my letter to my grandma.

"Donald and Dale Means."

'RITZY SIX' HEARD FROM

Then there's the letter signed by Florence Sanimel for "The Ritzy Six." Florence says:

"I read in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph about the Junior Komic Club and we want to join. Our group of six girls has started a chapter and we will be interested in getting credentials and buttons."

Florence will get the buttons and cards in a day or two.

Another lad writes:

"I belong to another club, but we have not had any activities in my neighborhood chapter for more than two months. The Junior Komic Club looks like a good one and I want to get in right away."

ACTIVITIES IN STORE

Well, there's going to be plenty doing when the Junior Komic Club gets all its plans made—plenty of shows and special parties. So boys and girls, don't wait until the last minute—send your application for membership in right away.

If you live near one of the Warner Theaters where there are now big chapter meetings every Saturday, you should go to next Saturday's meeting and enroll. If you do not live conveniently to one of these theaters the secretary will assign you to a chapter upon receipt of your application.

BIG SATURDAY PROGRAM

The announcement that big special entertainments are to be given at the downtown Stanley each month for the Warner Theater-Sun-Telegraph Chapters has been received with enthusiasm by the members of the club.

Additional details about the big show and how to get free tickets for it will be announced later in the Sun-Telegraph—the official newspaper for the Junior Komic Club.

4 MEN PLACED ON PROBATION

Elwood Shafer, 27, and James McGregory, 22, brothers-in-law of Middletown road, were placed upon probation for two years each by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker when they pleaded guilty of stealing 15 hams and 12 pairs of shoes from freight cars in the Scully yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The defendants told the court they were out of work and while gathering coal along the railroad tracks committed the theft, selling some of the loot.

Arthur Lasasso, 25, and Fred O. Zmuda, 21, clerks in stores in Larimer avenue and Penn avenue in which stations of the Pittsburgh Postoffice are located, were each placed under probation for two years by Judge Schoonmaker when they pleaded guilty of stealing registered mail.

MOTHER HELD IN RUM CASE

Joseph Kozlowski, 42, alleged proprietor of a moonshine resort at 12 South Fourteenth street, a block from the South Side Police Station, today was held for court by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court, on a charge of violating the Snyder act. Bail was set at $1,000.

Mrs. Daisy Gribbon, 32, of 6024 Station street, a mother of six children, was held for further investigation by Magistrate Jones, following testimony by the woman's husband, Joseph, that his wife spent much of her time in Kozlowski's establishment and neglected her children. He charged his wife with having sold their furniture, to which Mrs. Gribbon countered with the assertion that the furniture was sold to buy food and clothing for the children because Gribbon did not do so. Kozlowski testified Mrs. Gribbon was employed by him as a domestic.

BANK DIVIDEND HASTENED

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—A plan whereby depositors of closed banks in the state will be paid dividends within a short time was announced early today by William D. Gordon, state Secretary of Banking.

Approximately 98,000 depositors of three closed Philadelphia institutions will receive 20 per cent within three weeks, he said.

Under the plan a private bank, headed by John A. McCarthy, vice president of the Real Estate Trust Company, will be set up to handle liquidation of closed banks in Philadelphia.

After depositors of Philadelphia banks, closed for several weeks, have been cared for, Gordon said, depositors of closed institutions elsewhere in the state will receive dividends.

By setting up the private bank, Gordon pointed out, liquidation may be made much quicker than through any other channel.

SLAYER MOVED; MOB FOILED

BALTIMORE, Oct. 14.—(INS.)—Under heavy guard to prevent a possible lynching, Orphan Jones, Negro farm hand, who admitted killing a family of four, was brought to the local jail today from Snow Hill, Md.

While a mob of 2,000 surrounded the jail there, the 60-year-old man confessed he used an ax to murder Mr. and Mrs. Green K. Davis and their two daughters. He said he sought revenge for having been discharged by Davis.

He was smuggled out of jail and escorted here by a heavily-armed police guard.

Veteran Sues U. S. Over $10,000 Policy

Charles F. Knobloch, of 115 Morton avenue, Butler, a veteran of the World War, seeks to recover $8,755 from the government on a $10,000 war risk insurance policy, in a suit filed in Federal District Court. He enlisted June 26, 1918, and claims to have been permanently disabled before he received his discharge from military service.

Skull Fractured, Dies in Hospital

Twenty-four hours after he was removed to the McKeesport Hospital by the Wilmerding police, Elmer Kelly, 51, of 1710 Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, died today presumably of a fractured skull. Should Wife Stand by Her Hubby in All Troubles?

"For better or worse"—that is what Madge promised when she married her man.

How much shame . . . how much sacrifice and heartbreak should a wife endure for the sake of the man she loves? How much would you endure, if you were faced with the dreadful dilemma which has come into Madge's life?

Suppose you found that the fine, generous clean young husband whom you adored, and who adored you, was the father of a baby born two months before your marriage to a vicious, conniving woman whom he loathed.

Would you give him up that he might marry the other woman, and become real father to his little daughter?

Or would you fight for him against the child's claim?

Here is the story, just as Madge wrote it. If it were your story—what?

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I wonder if anyone ever presented a problem like mine to you before? Honest, it has me so baffled that I'm about half crazy.

TOLD EVERYTHING

"To begin with: I've been married only four months. And I'm no kid. Love (or what I thought was love) came and went in my life, but there was only one love, genuine—that came the day I met my husband. We were married just seven weeks after the day we met. I'm 24 and he is 26.

"Of all the idealistic matches—well, ours tops the list. We decided to start out being honest and frank with one another, not omitting a thing. Perfect understanding all the way through. And such confidences as we did know, and the ecstatic joy of those confidences. He simply told me his whole life, from A to Z, even as I did likewise.

"But, although some of the things he told me hurt, I swallowed them all. He omitted only one thing, which his conscience started to prick him about, and which he told me while we were on our honeymoon. Fancy how I felt to be told by the one man that he was the father of a baby 6 months old, and that he had never loved the mother.

LOVES HIS CHILD

"It seems they met at a party. He never saw her again for a while, she never loved him nor he her.

"She lived with her husband until after the baby was born. In fact, till after Harry and I were married. Then, suddenly, everything blew up. There was a big row, and she told her husband that some other man was the father of her child. Now she wants Harry to support her baby girl.

"I have been to see her, and honestly, it just breaks my heart to see that baby, which is the image of Harry. I believe she is a scheming, cruel woman. She has broken one man's heart, and disillusioned him, and now she wants to take my husband from me.

"Harry is so blue. I can't cheer him up, for he loves me, but he also loves his child, and wants to provide for her. He asked the woman if she would allow us to adopt the little girl, and she flatly refuses.

"What shall I do? Give my husband up to this woman for whom he feels only resentment? Or shall I fight for him? I love him in spite of all, with all my heart, and my heart is so torn between sympathy for him and a desire that he do the right thing that I can hardly keep my mind on what I'm doing.

"I wish you'd tell me—straight from the shoulder—what you think. I shall be looking for your answer. Madge."

A tough spot, little girl, and you're facing it gallantly. I wonder what the hundreds of married women who will read your letter will tell you to do. I have an unhappy suspicion that some of them will tell you to leave the man who has brought you so much sorrow . . . and many more would force him to choose between the child and you. But I'm not going to tell you to do either.

SHOULD HELP HIM

Hold on to your husband, and love him with all your heart, Madge. Forgive him as you, yourself, would want to be forgiven, if you had done wrong.

But, at the same time, help him to face his obligations.

If the child plainly is his—as you say it is—he should support it. He can, in most of our states, be forced to support it, even though the mother herself broke every moral law to give it birth. But he need not leave you, to support it. He need not sacrifice you to live with a worthless woman.

Does that seem an unhappy compromise? Justice is nearly always a compromise, Madge. But a half loaf is better than none at all.

Stick by your man, Madge. But make him stick by his honor. It will be hard for you both, at first. But in the end, life and love will be all the richer because you have borne this burden together. And a little child will bless you, some day.

Will the others give you advice like mine, I wonder.

Children's Greater Wants Make This Age Hard for Parents—Fay King

CLOTHES WERE WORN TWO OR THREE SEASONS
WHEN I WAS YOUR AGE I WASN'T DREAMING OF ALL THE LUXURIES YOU ARE WANTING!
HAPPY HOURS SPENT SEWING FOR A SMALL DOLL
TAT-TING

By FAY KING

This is a difficult age for parents and children.

Children want so much these days. And they are not to blame. There is so much to see and want now.

Parents are apt to be impatient with children who sigh for automobiles and want to go to the movies every day and long for every change of styles.

Parents forget that when they were children there was very little to long for.

A doll to sew for. Skates, a bicycle, a matinee once a week. And if one had a becoming outfit of good material it was worn two or three seasons.

We were more satisfied because there was less to wish for.

Household Hints

When making jams and jellies stand glass jars on a wet cloth while filling, and they will not crack.

The best way to test a sandwich or a sponge cake to see if it is baked sufficiently is to touch the top lightly with the finger.

Beetroots will retain their color if a pinch of carbonate of soda is added to the water in which they are boiled.

If beef or mutton dripping is beaten to a cream and a few drops of lemon juice and a little carbonate of soda added, it will be excellent for cake-making.

To remove stains from a gabardine frock, sponge with warm water to which a little ammonia has been added.

Whiting, moistened with water, is excellent for cleaning windows. Allow it to dry on, then rub off, and polish with newspaper.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If the gentle reader has chin-chin trouble, two chins where one should be, she must get busy. They go from bad to worse, dragging loose the fibers and tissues of the neck, spreading havoc and destruction. Spreading with a heavy massage cream and slapping briskly is one form of treatment. Rolling flesh between thumb and finger seats fat cells away. Frequent ironings with ice are essential and applications of cold water and astringents are what the beauty doctor orders.

Cutting cuticle at the nail base is not advisable. The cuticle renews itself, becomes thicker and is more likely to cling to the nail. Soak in soap suds, apply hot olive oil, and rub the cuticle with a soft towel, detaching it gently.

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Showing Full Strength at Once

Just as the declarer opens with a bid of one, two or three, in order that his partner may know what supporting strength insures game, so dummy should on his first assist or shift endeavor to make clear to the original bidder whether a part score, game or slam must be the safe bidding limit. The next hand illustrates this point.

Hand Y
♠ K-J-10-8-4
♥ A-Q-3
♦ A-Q-J

Hand A
♠ 9-2
♥ 7-6-4-2
♣ Q-J-10-6
♦ K-10-8

Hand B
♠ 7-5
♥ K-J-10-9
♣ K-7-4
♦ 9-6-5-2

Hand Z
♠ A-Q-6-3
♥ 8-5
♣ A-9-5-2
♦ 7-4-3

Z made an absolutely minimum opening bid of 1-spade, upon 8 points (4 probable tricks).

A and B held jointly only 1½ quick tricks; they won one heart trick when Z finessed the dummy's Q, and they also won a single club trick, giving the declarer 8-odd. But of course that is a side issue. The first question to consider is what Y should do with his hand counting 16 points (8 probable tricks) support for Z's spade declaration.

Counting tricks is quite accurate up to 10, beyond 10 there ordinarily occurs a duplication of values, or a misfit of holdings, that causes estimated tricks to exceed those won in actual play. Y knew this, so he did not jump his partner's bid to 6 spades, as his 8 probable tricks might suggest; he jumped the declaration to 5 spades, thereby saying: "Partner, even minimum bidding strength in your hand should give us 5-odd, perhaps 6-odd. If you hold a single probable trick in excess of bare opening bid requirements, bid 8 spades, pass in case you have declared upon minimum values." Of course Z had made a very weak opening bid and he had to pass, but had the missing king of hearts been held by A a small slam could have been made. On the other hand, had B held the missing king of diamonds only 4-odd could have been won.

The principle of at once showing full assisting strength is important. If you have a timid partner and raise his opening bid of 1 heart only once upon 5 assisting tricks, when he also holds 5 probable tricks, you may lose game because he does not advance the declaration one trick, thus allowing you to bid game. But if you at once jump partner to 3 hearts on your 5 tricks, probably even a timid partner will venture to bid game upon his own 5 tricks.

Correct Manners

Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am having a social gathering at my house and I would like your way of writing a letter to friends asking them to attend the party.

DIANA.

I love to write an invitation to a party! Will this help?

Dear Rosanna:

I am going to give a party at my home Saturday, November the tenth. Now, of course, it won't be a real party to me unless you come. Can you come on that date and will you? I shall be so happy if you will.

The party is to be most informal—just a gathering of some friends who know one another and others that I want to have know one another. Will you come about eight-thirty?

With best love and high anticipation of seeing you on the tenth, I am

Yours most cordially,

DIANA SOUTH.

Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I had only been married a short time when I first met his grandmother. The second time we visited her another couple went with us. Was it proper for me to introduce this couple to Grandmother or should my husband have introduced them?

Mrs. S.

Either one could have made this introduction with propriety and correctness. Usually in making such introductions it is the more socially alert person who does it. That is, it doesn't make any difference who does it, so long as there is not an awkward wait for someone to do it. Since it was your husband's grandmother it would have been charming for him to make the introduction, since he probably would be especially proud of doing it, but it wouldn't have been incorrect for him to have allowed you to do it.

Millions gargling for "dear life" while bad breath still hangs on

Don't waste dollars on antiseptics that must be used full strength. We've discovered a new antiseptic that, even when diluted with two parts of water, kills germs in 10 seconds.

GARGLING may clear your conscience but fail to clear your breath. That happens to millions. Why? Because they gargle with antiseptics that can't kill germs when mixed with water. They fool themselves. But not bad breath—not cold!—not sore throat. If you dilute your antiseptic use one that kills germs when diluted. To check bad breath due to unhygienic mouth conditions destroy the germs that cause it.

COLDS, SORE THROAT

Pepsodent Antiseptic does double duty when fighting bad breath. For at the same time it combats colds and throat irritations. Remember P. A. is 3 to 11 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics . . . and it kills germs when diluted.

A radical new antiseptic discovery

Now there's a revolutionary antiseptic on the market—Pepsodent Antiseptic. Its formula is a radical advance. It climaxes the best antiseptic study of 50 years. A germ-killing agent is employed unlike those now in use. It makes Pepsodent Antiseptic from 3 to 11 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics, depending on which one you have been using.

Kills germs in 10 seconds diluted with 2 parts of water

That is the startling news in this new discovery! Think! You can mix Pepsodent Antiseptic with one or even two parts of water, to suit your taste, and it still kills germs in ten seconds. That's where other leading mouth antiseptics fail. Yet in spite of all that power, Pepsodent Antiseptic is utterly safe when used full strength. What a weapon this new antiseptic is in fighting bad breath.

New security against bad breath (Halitosis*)

Pepsodent Antiseptic checks bad breath 1 to 2 hours longer! That's Pepsodent Antiseptic's record in fighting this widespread social offense due to unhygienic mouth conditions. Immediately after use, 95% of germs on mouth surfaces are destroyed. Two hours later the number of germs remains reduced by 75%. That is far longer acting than other leading mouth antiseptics. And remember when you use Pepsodent Antiseptic to check bad breath you are doing double duty by also fighting colds.

$3 worth for $1

To kill germs—most mouth antiseptics must be used full strength. So to mix them with water is a waste of money. Pepsodent Antiseptic can be mixed with twice its own volume of water. That means every $1 bottle does what 3 bottles of other mouth antiseptics do. Goes 3 times as far—you get $3 worth for $1 . . . a saving of $2.

Checking bad breath and combating colds are only two uses for this remarkable antiseptic. There are scores of other uses. Some are listed on this page. Learn to rely on Pepsodent Antiseptic whenever a safe, effective germ-killing agent is required. Keep it in the home. Take it with you traveling.

Again we say: Quit being good to germs. They've laughed at you long enough. Play safe. Buy an antiseptic that really kills germs when diluted. Remember: You can fool yourself but you can't fool bad breath.

Some of the 50 different uses for this modern antiseptic

Cold in Head
Throat Irritations
Voice Hoarseness
Bad Breath
Cold Sores
Canker Sores
Mouth Irritations
After Extractions
After Shaving
Minor Cuts
Blisters
Loose Dandruff
Checks Under-Arm Perspiration
Tired, Aching Feet

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Roderick Reveals Secret of the "Scorched Pants"

I hurried downstairs after Roderick, hoping that I would be able to catch him and silence him before he should betray—innocently enough—the secret concerning their clothing which his brothers were making such strenuous efforts to keep from Marion and Mary—especially Mary. I knew how intense and out of all proportions is the self-consciousness of the adolescent boy, and knew that an incident which older youths, of college age, would tell on themselves in most hilarious fashion, was causing Hank and Bill real suffering in their fear that it might come to light.

Ahead of me I heard Roderick calling, "Hank, oh, Hank! where are you? I want to tell you something." But no answer came to him, and I could visualize his brothers hiding in the back stairway waiting for Dicky to spirit them away to Bridgehampton, and heaping anathemas upon their small brother's head.

"Ho—o—o! Rod! C'mon out! The folks are all here."

A babble of voices confirmed his words, and I hurried to the door through which Lillian, Mary, Marion and Harry were coming, their arms piled with bundles and their faces beaming. The joyousness of the girls I knew was caused by the acquisition of the new frocks and accessories which they had gone to Southampton to purchase, and that of Lillian and Harry by the even more satisfying joy of bestowing longed-for things upon a beloved child.

Mary dropped her bundles and dived for me as soon as she spied me.

"Oh! Auntie Madge you darling!" she cried. "Thank you so much for all these lovely things. Where's Uncle Dicky? I want to thank him, too. I see his car's here. That means the boys have come. Where are the rascals? Suppose I'd better give 'em the once over."

Beneath the carefully staged nonchalance with which so many of our younger generation mask their emotions, I knew that there was real affection for her brothers, and that she was eager to see them; but I gave one of our private signals to Lillian as I answered carelessly —"They're with Dicky somewhere. They'll come in soon," and she promptly played up, saying with assumed impatience: "They can wait a minute or two. Come on upstairs, girls. I want to see what Madge and Katherine think of these frills we bought. If they don't leave a trail of whatever is the modern substitute for masculine heartbreaks, then I'm a bum guesser."

"Say! Mary!" Junior edged himself into prominence and seized his moment. "I know where the boys are."

"So do I." Roderick added jealously, but Junior rattled on, impervious to interruption, and apparently unhearing the frantic "Junior!" which I shot at him, but which I did not repeat. I knew that emphasized objection upon my part to the revelation which I saw was now inevitable, would only make matters worse. But my fingers twitched with an unholy desire to shake my young son, who palpably was much pleased with himself as a raconteur.

"They're going with Uncle Dicky to Bill Bates' over at Bridgehampton to buy some white flannel pants. They was terrible worried because their clothes was all wrinkled on the ride coming down, and they wanted to dress up in their best. But their pants was all wrinkled. Dad pressed their coats for 'em, 'n' then he left 'em to press their own pants, and Hank burned a hole right through his ——"

"'N'. I yelled at Hank. 'Now see what you've done!' Roderick snatched the chanting of the saga deftly away from Junior and planted himself in the limelight, "and Hank turned around quick, and the iron caught me on the arm and burned me. See!" he displayed a bandaged arm proudly—"Granzie fixed it up for me. But Hank didn't burn me on purpose. I was awful mad and said he did, but he didn't and I've got to find him and tell him. Has he gone yet?" He finished, breathless, with a query to Junior.

The sound of a departing motor—faint—Dicky evidently had handled his gear shifts admirably—came to our ears, and I answered his question.

"Yes, they've gone, and I want you boys to go directly to your own room and stay until I come. I have something to tell you before the boys come back."

The youngsters looked at each other and then at me in evident panic.

"What've we done now?" Roderick asked plaintively, and Harry Underwood turned away abruptly.

"Nothing bad." I reassured them. "I just want to talk to you."

"Oh!!" With relief in voices and faces they started for the door, to turn back with a look of appeal.

"Kin we see the new things, before we have the talking?" Junior asked, not eagerly, but with the propensity of all small boys—and girls—to postpone anything boresome, and to declare themselves in on anything that happens.

"Afterward, perhaps, not before." I told them, and resignedly they turned toward the stairs again. When we had heard the door close upon them, Harry Underwood grinned widely down at me.

"All right, Missis, we promise," he drawled. "We won't spill any beans. But tell us just how you want 'em conserved."

How to Keep Well -:-

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Air the Bedrooms to Induce Sound Sleep

Inability to sleep has been one of the bothers of mankind for many centuries. This condition, called "insomnia" by the doctors, is referred to in all the ancient writings. It has been a factor in the health history of many races and nations.

Dr. Copeland

Sleep is essential to the welfare of the body. The need is not alone for a sufficient number of hours of sleep, but, in order to be beneficial, the sleep must be restful and uninterrupted.

Insomnia is a symptom in several diseases. There are many, many different causes for it. Indeed, it is often difficult to lay one's finger on the exact cause.

When sleeplessness is due to pain, we do not consider it as really insomnia. This is true of other conditions where, as a result of some disease in the body, the person is awakened from his slumber. Under these perfectly plain conditions, the sleeplessness is quickly overcome when the underlying disease is treated and cured.

Insomnia may be due to some intestinal disorder or to extreme nervousness. In cases of this type, it is necessary that care be taken of the diet. It is unwise to eat just before retiring.

Make sure there is plenty of ventilation in your sleeping room. It may be advisable to take a warm tub bath on retiring. Good results sometimes follow the taking of a glass of warm milk or other warm drink before bedtime. If the feet are cold when going to bed, a hot footbath or a hot water bag placed at the feet, is of great aid in combating insomnia.

I strongly advise against the use of medication unless it is prescribed by your physician. It is true that sleep may be obtained from the taking of certain medicine. But in this way a habit may be developed and dependence must be placed on the drug.

Patients convalescing from prolonged illness are sometimes unable to sleep at night. Usually this can be explained by their drowsiness and "cat naps" during the day and consequently an inability to sleep at night. By regulating the hours of sleep during the day this can be easily remedied. By means of massage, too, and sponge baths, the tone of the body can be improved. After this treatment such persons are apt to adjust themselves and sleep more restfully at night.

There is no doubt that the ability to sleep is a habit. Some individuals can sleep sitting on the edge of a chair, whereas others require all the luxuries of a well-appointed home.

Answers to Health Queries

A young, expectant mother, Q.—Would it be harmful for me to avoid pastries and other rich, fattening foods at this time? I have been very stout and have reduced and do not wish to put on any unnecessary weight, but at the same time I want to do what is right. I intend making my diet consist of fruits, vegetables and milk chiefly.

A.—Restricting the sugars and starches should not prove harmful, but you should be careful to eat of a well-balanced diet at this particular time.

'Y' GIRLS HEAR TALK ON MARRYING

Audience Told to Develop Skill In Social Lines and Not to Be Highbrow, Managerial

"This Business of Marrying," the lecture given at Central Branch Young Women's Christian Association last night by Dr. Henry M. Busch was, as one might expect from such a speaker, full of sane, commonsense comment, advice and suggestion. Marriage may mean different things to different people. Dr. Busch said, it may mean linking of families, romantic adventure, economic security, escape from loneliness and, in the case of some women, escape from the scorn of being unmarried, but in the best sense it is the interweaving of two lives with a common purpose.

If marriage is to be successful Dr. Busch continued, individuality must be maintained and there must be respect for the other's intimate personality. Courtship he referred to as "a state of parading your best self," but, he said, all successful marriages retain an element of this.

To find a mate he advised girls to "set the stage"—to put themselves in places where they will meet the kind of men they want to know, not to tie themselves too tightly in professions where they will not meet men, to make themselves attractive and to develop skill in various social lines such as dancing, swimming, tennis and music; above all, they must be womenly women and they must not be highbrow nor managerial.

Told to Set Stage

Dr. Busch emphasized that the same level of intelligence and a wholesome attitude towards sex were necessary and he stressed the importance of the woman's continued mental growth after marriage.

The lecture was the first in a series of three to be given at Central Branch.

Smart Sleeves Accent The New Frocks

« « « « You Can Afford to Wear Grabowsky Clothes this Fall » » » » »

Sleeves are so very important this season. They are shirred... puffed above the wrist... or at the elbow. + Bright colours are much in favour... fuschia, jade, dark wines and brilliant reds. The dress ofttimes combines the gay and the sombre, with a bright top and sleeve and a darker skirt. + For dinner time, the dresses are more informal... not too dressy, and one's shoulders are covered.

WOOLENS IN FANCY WEAVES FAVORED FOR AUTUMN WEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Oct. 14 — Have you any wool is a question taken from the nursery rhyme and asked of every textile house by every dressmaker. More and more wool dresses and ensembles are being shown by all the houses, not only things for morning and general wear, but dressy ensembles for smart luncheon and afternoon activities. All sorts of new and fascinating weaves are now available and the leading textile people promise us more before the autumn season will have run its course. Fancy weaves have been achieved by all the textile designers, every house having its own version of the woolies. Pebbly surfaces, raised patterns, crepey weaves, diagonals, all are represented in what must surely be the zenith of the wool age. Just now fancy weaves in light shades are being shown made up into most attractive ensembles and frocks and are being quickly bought by private and professional buyers.

* * *

ONE OF THE MOST delectable ensembles shown this week has been sketched for the readers of this paper. It should be interesting, for it is the type of thing that is being bought by the most fashionable clients of the house of Yteb. This particular ensemble was bought before it was placed in the Yteb winter collection. The coat and skirt are of fine woolen in a fancy weave, while the blouse is in jersey. Banana color is chosen for both suit and jersey and the fur collar is of fox dyed to exactly match. The belt, which is of leather, is an exact color match. On both coat and skirt, Madame Yteb has cleverly worked the side pockets into the general decorative scheme of the model by means of curving encrustations. On the skirt only, the edges of the pockets are stitched in several rows. These pocket panels end in loose deep pleats at each side, front and back. The neckline of the frock is both neat and smart, a combination not always to be found.

Get the BIG package of Rinso. (Try its rich suds for dishes, too!) Cup for cup, Rinso goes twice as far as lightweight, puffed-up soaps.

Unsung New Yorkers

THE TWO MEN were partners in business. It was a lucrative business, too. In normal times, the partners were able to split something like $100,000 a year. Both were young and both seemed to enjoy life. It looked as though this was a partnership that would go on indefinitely, and with excellent results. It looked that way to the outside world, that is. Behind the scenes things were not so rosy.

The reason was a basic difference in the two men. George was a hard worker; a willing, ambitious, determined man. He had been married but two years when this story opens, and the only thing that came before his business was his wife. He idolized the girl.

Frank's character and position were vastly different. He laughed at the idea of marriage and played the field at every turn. Broadway was his meat, and the cafes always had a ringside table for him whenever he wished to play the sucker. Men liked him. He was what is known as "a good guy."

It was his "good guy" angle that formed Frank's value to the partnership. He was better equipped to dig up new customers than George. He mixed well—and he never failed to sell himself. So, although Frank paid little more than an occasional visit to the office, George was willing to carry most of the work on his own shoulders.

Not that he didn't try to have Frank listen to reason. He did. He pointed out that Broadway and the horses never did much for any man's future. He urged his partner to pay more attention to business and less attention to stage doors.

But Frank's reply was always the same.

"Time enough for the heavy stuff when I'm ready to settle down," he grinned. "Right now I'm having the time of my life. If we need a few more customers, partner, I'll have them in within a week. You leave it to little Frankie."

Things went along in that fashion for two or three years. Business was on the increase, but the results were all due to George's hard work. Frank did almost nothing at all now. He simply drew his check at the end of the week and congratulated George on the way things were going.

His friends urged George to stop being a fool. His wife gave him the same counsel. Why carry a partner who brought nothing to the concern?

Matters came to a definite head one afternoon when George was going over the books of the concern. Much to his amazement, he found a $3,000 voucher in his partner's name that had never been returned to the cashier. He went further in his investigation. Before two hours were gone, he learned that Frank had "borrowed" almost $20,000 in the last few months.

That night, on one of his extremely infrequent excursions to the hot spots, George hit Broadway. He visited all the places in which his partner might be found, and he finally located him at 1 in the morning. Frank was in fine fettle. He was entertaining a large party.

It was really a pity that George had to disturb him at that time. But that's what happened. He led his partner to a secluded spot and asked him what was what.

Frank admitted the "borrowing" without the slightest hesitation. And he did the admitting as though his action had been the most natural thing in the world.

"Sure I took it, George," he asserted gaily. "I just ran a trifle short, that's all. Had to have a little dough to carry on. That's the way I've always been, you know. I——"

He stopped abruptly. Because his partner had seized him by the collar and yanked him forward.

"Listen to me, Frank," muttered George harshly. "You've been talking and kidding me for a long time. Now the game is over. I'll do the talking—and there'll be no kidding.

"People have been telling me that you're no good. They begged me to get rid of you before you did something that would ruin the entire concern. I didn't want to take the step because I thought there was a chance that you might snap out of it and get down to business. I see that I was wrong."

He paused a moment. Then——

"I'm not going to have you tossed into jail, Frank, although you know that I could do it. I'm going to stand that $20,000 loss because there's nothing else I can do about it. But, commencing at this very moment, our partnership is a thing of the past. And if you think you're not getting a fortunate break, you're very much mistaken. It's a lucky thing you're not in jail at this moment.

"That's all there is, Frank. You're a sneaking, little rat. We're through."

George arose. Frank wet his lips.

"You've got me," he muttered. "All right. I'll step out. But I'll square this thing some day." . . .

Some three years passed without trouble of any kind. Then, suddenly, George's wife died. The poor guy was like a lost soul. This woman had been everything to him. He had actually worshiped her every move. And now what?

Among those who called with condolences was Frank. For the first time since that night in the speakeasy, the two men shook hands.

"Im sorry, George," murmured the ex-partner. "We had our differences when I took that money, and I regret it bitterly now. At a time like this, I just had to come and ask you humbly to accept the condolences of an old friend."

George took Frank's hand in his again.

"This has almost driven me crazy, Frank," he said weakly. "I loved her so that I'm afraid I will go crazy without her. It's good of you to comfort me, friend. Let's say that we're pals all over again. It will make my sorrow a little easier to bear." . . .

Just two days after the funeral, a letter arrived at George's home. It was addressed to his late wife. He opened it.

"I'm up here in the woods, my loved one," he read, "and I'm not going to communicate with a soul until I come to town to meet you at the end of the week. I'm working hard on the play, and you are the inspiration that drives me onward.

"My arms ache for you. I think of nothing but your kisses; I dream of nothing but your lovely lips. I wait anxiously for our next few hours of love. I love you, love you, love you."

The letter was unsigned. It had been sent from a town in the Catskill Mountains. George pressed his hands to his head. Something seemed to snap inside. He threw back his head and laughed wildly. . . .

* * *

George, they say, will spend the rest of his life in the madhouse. He doesn't know, of course, that Frank sent the letter as his promised revenge. . . .

Shipwreck and Catastrophe Which Featured Ince Dramas Live On

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 14.

Bits of pictures made by the late Thomas H. Ince still are being seen on the screen today. Unknowingly, audiences gaze on "Long Shots" of Louise Glaum, Charlie Ray, Dorothy Dalton, Wallace Hawley, Bill Hart and all the old Ince stars.

These scenes from early pictures are sold to small film companies in South Dakota, who wear them out and then purchase the producer's entire film library on his death.

Charles Ray

Scenes of shipwreck and of catastrophe which abounded in the Ince melodramas are those which are not dated, are the most commonly sought after stock in Purdom's library. He has devised a way to match the old film with the new and charges from $2.50 a foot to $500 a scene for his material.

To keep the library up-to-date he also purchases new film scraps from all over the world.

El Brendel was going to make a purchase at a Hollywood tire shop until he read the sign:

"Tire bargains—they won't last long."

When Jack Oakie's mother was a school-teacher in Sedalia, Mo., Al Rockett and Eugene Pallette were two of her pupils. This was before Jack's time. You've never heard harmony until you've listened to Bill Powell, Dick Barthelmess and Bill's combination valet, handyman, cook and rubber. Those well known athletes, Jack Mulhall and Roland Brown, have joined Doug Fairbanks' bathing beauties. Hear tell Mary Pickford is rehearsing a New York play in the name of Lottie. Ha. Fox's experts, portrait photographer, fireman, mistaker for Charlie Farrell, Lawrence Grant will be master of ceremonies when the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences makes its annual awards. Jean Hersholt is going in for clay modeling these days. . . Marie Quillan, Eddie's sister, has just made her first movie, a western.

RECOVERY COMPLETE

Only the other night Evelyn Knapp made her first public appearance since her injury. Doctors now say however she will be able to go to work by October 19 when production starts on Bill Powell's next picture, "High Pressure." Warners have given Evelyn the ingenue lead. And when she finishes this picture she will go into "The Honorable Mr. Wong" starring Eddie Robinson.

Caruso's Cousin Plays In 'Extra' Roles

When extras were called to appear in a scene of Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Tonight Or Never" in which Gloria Swanson is starred as an opera singer one of the hat players proved to be a relative of one of the greatest operatic stars of all time. The extra is Nick Caruso, cousin of the late Enrico Caruso. He has been working in motion pictures for two years.

Stage Star

Tallulah Bankhead, stage star, has the leading role in "My Sin," photoplay opening Thursday in the Fulton.

Sheridan Has Gun-Toting Calamity

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Calamity Jane, that gal who was a terror in the old West, lives again. She's the inspiration and the principal character in "Caught," a picture which opened a three-day engagement in the Sheridan Square yesterday.

Louise Dresser portrays Calamity and makes her a gun-toting, cigar-smoking, bottle-tilting Jane. She drinks men under the table, steals the pants off cowboys and gets into a row with the U. S. Cavalry.

TWO REASONS FOR ARMY

The cavalry are in the picture for two reasons. First, to give Richard Arlen a chance to wear a uniform and to be hero; and second, to clean up the frontier town in which Calamity operates, both as a barroom lady and a cattle thief.

Miss Dresser has to her credit one of the best portrayals ever offered on the silent screen—that of "The Goose Woman." But as Calamity Jane, though a good shot with a revolver, she misses fire as an actress. You get the idea that Hollywood hasn't done right by Calamity.

COFFEE ON A MOUNTAIN

Soldier Arlen turns out to be Calamity's long lost son and ends up by winning Frances Dee, as a little innocent girl who goes out to the great big West to be had. As for Calamity, the final fadeout leaves her drinking coffee on a mountain with a dumb and uncouth henchman.

"This doesn't make sense," says the henchman.

"Who said things have to make sense?" replies Calamity.

Continuous Film Work For Regis Toomey

Few film actors have been busier in recent months than Regis Toomey. With hardly a day between, he went from "The Finger Points" under loan at First National into Paramount's "Murder by the Clock," to Universal for the lead in "Graft" and back to Paramount for "24 Hours" and "Touchdown."

SunBeau Wins In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Sun Beau, greatest purse winner the track has ever known, is shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, winning the Hawthorne Cup and a $20,000 stake by beating out that other great horse, Mate, by a length and a half, ending his racing career in a blaze of glory. The Globe Trotter gives a thrilling and detailed description of the race. It is shown in the Penn and other theaters.

Mrs. Hoover christens the largest flying boat ever built in the United States. She gives it the name American Clipper and then this giant seaplane, which can carry 45 passengers, takes off from the Potomac at Anacostia on her trial trip over the Capitol and Washington Monument.

Thousands upon thousands of sheep are shown coming down from the mountains in Colorado to the valleys that provide them with food for the winter. As far as the eye can see these immense herds clamber down the hillsides, forming a picture of rare beauty.

The fishing schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, American pride, races against the schooner Elsie off Gloucester to see which one will go to Halifax to battle against the Canadian hope, Bluenose. At the start the Elsie takes the lead, but after a terrific struggle through raging seas, the Thebaud pulls away and wins by eight minutes.

Thrilling highlights of the final game of the world series, with the Cardinals carrying off the crown after the sensational rally by the Athletics in the ninth inning, are shown. It is one of the greatest pictures ever made.

The trans-Pacific fliers receive an amazing welcome as the guests of the City of Seattle. Appa rently the entire population turns out to do honor to the heroes of the air as the first fliers to hop from Japan to America without a stop are lauded by city and state officials.

The Pittsburgh Panthers make a feast out of the West Virginia football players and massacre the invaders to the tune of 34-0. The touchdowns come so fast you can hardly keep up with them.

Steppe's 'Rumba Girls,' Academy Show

Harry Steppe's new Columbia burlesque, "Rumba Girls," is current in the Academy Theater. Steppe is a Yiddish character comic. Jerri McCauley sings and dances. Ned Dandy, comedian, and Tim Benson, character man, also are prominent. Other players include Gladys McCormick, Arda Karlova and Sally O'Donnell. There is a singing and dancing chorus.

String Ensemble Opens Series Tonight

The String Symphonic Ensemble of Pittsburgh will present its first concert of the season in the Carnegie Lecture Hall tonight. The ensemble is under the direction of Oscar E. Del Bianco. Nine other concerts are to be given in the current series, the dates being November 4 and 25, December 17, January 6 and 27, February 17, March 9 and 30 and April 20.

French Exposition 'Traveltalk' Topic

France's Colonial Exposition, which brought natives and exhibits from all parts of the world to Paris, was described in word and picture last night by E. M. Newman in the first of his twenty-third season's "traveltalks" at Carnegie Music Hall. Almost like a trip around the world was this presentation. Next Tuesday Mr. Newman will give a "traveltalk" on Spain, the Republic.

Titled Lady

Fay Bainter plays the role of Lady Mary in "The Admirable Crichton," Barrie comedy coming to the Nixon next week.

Lily Damita May Play In Cantor Film

Lily Damita may be Eddie Cantor's leading lady in "The Kid From Spain," which Samuel Goldwyn is shortly to place in production as a successor to "Palmy Days," according to information received from Hollywood. Definite selection of the golden-haired French stage and screen star will depend to some extent on whether the story develops a role suitable to her, and on her availability at the time shooting begins.

Love, After a Depression

Here is my last year's love, and it has lain
Upon the shelf for such a long, long while
That now, perhaps, it can't be used again;
It might be called passe, or out of style.

And yet, it seems so fresh and hardly worn,
A little brushing up, and it would do . . .
Of course, its veil of glamour's slightly torn,

A few more vows breathed in a Summer night
Would make its renovation quite complete.
Tack on some honeysuckle, soft moonlight,

And really, I can see no simple reason
Why it should not pull through another season.
Kathleen Lamb.

The Comeback Lovely

It is on rare occasions that confrere Hellinger raises his tones or loses his temper. But Lew Brown had an appointment with him the other day and never showed up. He phoned Hellinger the next morning, however, to offer an alibi.

"Oh," screamed Hellinger. "You make me sick. You're nothing but a low-down bum. Don't you ever talk to me again and what's more you can go to the devil. Now, what do you think of that?"

"Okay," indifferently said Brown before he hung up. "I'll tell him."

You've Met Him

Description of a phoney:

"The first time you meet him you do not like him at all. But, after that—you hate him!"

Form of Criticism

Whatever became of the old gags, "Times are so tough that the gigolos are dancing with each other!" and "the pigeons in the parks are now feeding the people?" both of which appeared here, the latter from Groucho Marx's pen.

They're in Eddie Cantor's book, of course.

Poor Little Rich Girl

They tell how and why the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Philly was built. The story goes that Joseph Widener's youngest daughter was smoking a cigaret one luncheon time in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in that town. The management embarrassed the gal by making her quit smoking.

She wept as she told the story of her humiliation to her rich father who immediately built the Ritz in opposition.

Directly across the way!

The Morning Mail

"Dear Mr. Winchell," writes W. W. J. Mulligan, city editor of the Vineland (N. J.) Post, "perhaps you would be interested to know that a common title, Gossip, oft applied to you, was defended in no uncertain terms by Prof. Burges Johnson, of Syracuse University, at the annual banquet of the New Jersey Newspaper Institute, at Rutgers University, October 5, 1931.

"Johnson said the word gossip came from two Saxon words, God and kin, meaning that a gossipy person was one of God's chosen ones because he or she exercised so much charity and interest in other person's affairs. (Hence, this might imply that Gossip Winchell will turn into Saint Winchell!!!!)

"He also defended persons who give impending rumors by saying if the persons heard them by way of mouth, the rumors would be distorted a thousand times more than the newspaper or columnist does. So there! Sincerely."

Wiseys

"Dear Walter," affectionately writes Leo Townsend, "a guy stopped me for a quarter today. But what got me sore was when he asked me to help him start his car! Love makes the world go round — with other guys' wives."

Newspaperman Stuff

Among other chills and shudders that go with being a reporter was the one that sent the shivers over the group of typewriter destroyers who witnessed the hanging of a murderer in Canada recently. So Art Bossin reports.

The condemned fellow was boastful from the moment of his arrest. As he stepped upon the gallows beneath the noose he laughed and said to the newspapermen witnesses:

"Well, aintcha gonna wish a pal so long?"

Vovelette

Then there's the true story of the newspaper reporter, who tried to commit suicide the other day. The poor chap was up to here in debt. There was no way out. He owed everybody and they were dunning him for payment. Then, to make him more miserable, his wife left him.

So he went home and turned on the gas.

But his life was saved! By, of all persons! By another bill collector!

Reportorial Inaccuracy

"Harry Hershfield had a terrible nightmare the other night. He dreamed he had to stand in the second row when a flashlight was taken."—H. I. Phillips in the Sun.

Dreamed? It actually happened at the Chevalier dinner!

4 Swissvale Boys Accused in Thefts

According to police the boys stole an automobile owned by William Isles, of 1601 Aurelia street. They are also accused of stealing 49 pounds of flashlight batteries from the railroad car. Because of their youth the Sun-Telegraph will not publish their names.

CHEMICAL BLAST BURNS FIREMEN

—Expert Explaining Proper Way to Wear Them!—

MME. HAMILTON JEFFRIES . . . "WEARING SHOES RIGHT . . ."

Mme. Jeffries, in Pittsburgh for Shoe Style Week, as she explained that the way one wears his shoes—and who doesn't wear 'em?—is as important as the kind of shoes that one might wear.

BOY, FOUR MEN HURT BY AUTOS

Hurled to the roadway when their motorcycle was struck by a hit-run auto in Saw Mill Run boulevard, Regis Brooks, 21, of 2314 Juliet street, and James Filson, 21, of 1209 West North avenue, were seriously injured. They were removed to the Passavant Hospital.

Albert Tute, 19, of 290 Forty-fifth street, was taken to West Penn Hospital early today, suffering severe bruises received when an automobile in which he was riding collided with another car in Bigelow boulevard at Kirkpatrick street. Tute was riding in a machine driven by Edward Witevwicz, 27, of 270 Fisk street, when it collided with the car of Leroy McCreery, 35, of 444 Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg. Both drivers were arrested.

Knocked down by an automobile while crossing Middle street at Foreland street early today, W. L. Duffner, 63, of 527 Suismon street, suffered severe bruises. He was treated at Presbyterian Hospital and taken home. Police arrested the driver of the car, L. H. Kalthoff, 37, of 4 Millvale road.

MINERS' WAGE PARLEY SET

Representatives of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation will meet Monday with representatives of the miners' union committees to discuss differences over the proposed wage cut of 15 per cent which the corporation plans to put into effect, P. T. Fagan, district president of the United Mine Workers, said yesterday.

Several months ago when miners went back to work after a strike, an agreement was signed with the company providing for meetings every 90 days to discuss wages rates. At a meeting held Monday, representatives of miners at the Coverdale mine of the corporation voted to demand the wages they were being paid instead of accepting the cut proposed by the concern.

MILLER GRASPS U. S. OFFER OF AID

Chairman Requests Pinchot Approval to Distribute Government Goods in City

Additional plans whereby the Surplus for the Needy Committee may better serve the needy of the district were being formulated today by heads of the organization. With the announcement by the United States government that it would sell shoes in job lots at a minimum price to responsible parties for distribution to the needy, Attorney Harry I. Miller, chairman of the committee, has wired Gov. Pinchot for permission to distribute the goods in the Pittsburgh district.

CANNING PLANT BUSY

Operations at the committee's canning plant at 1455 Spring Garden avenue, North Side, were going ahead today on schedule. More than 150,000 cans of fruit and vegetables have already been produced by the factory for distribution to the needy of the district, according to J. F. Quick, director.

On the invitation of Quick, Clyde Campbell, chemist of the bureau of foods and chemistry, state Department of Agriculture, inspected the factory and equipment and made analyses of the canned food. Campbell, whose experience in factory and laboratory methods extends over 25 years, said of the association's facilities and methods:

"I was very agreeably surprised at the good conditions which I found there, considering that most of the men working there are inexperienced in canning procedure. The floors and walls are clean, as are the vessels and equipment. The committee sponsoring the canning program is to be congratulated."

After making an analysis of the canned food stuffs, he pronounced them clean, and to contain food values equal to those found in any average food stuffs on the market, officials of the factory said.

SUGAR FUND SOUGHT

Further appeals for cash contributions for the purchase of sugar were being made today. This is the only item for which funds must be obtained, according to officers.

Distribution of all products will still be placed in the hands of welfare organizations in the Pittsburgh district, according to Quick. This will help eliminate duplication of families on the lists of many charities, heads of the organization pointed out.

Injured by Autos, 2 Men in Hospital

Two men are in Homestead Hospital today suffering injuries received when hit by automobiles last night. John E. Boyle, 44, of 2620 Forbes street, suffered body bruises when hit by a machine driven, police say, by William Ginley, of 119 Merritt avenue, Mt. Oliver. Charles Wazyk, 28, of 117 River avenue, Homestead, suffered a broken right leg when hit by the car driven by Leonard Rigdon, of River boulevard, Kennywood Park.

GROCER SURVEY TO OPEN HERE MONDAY

Five Federal Employes To Begin Drive Sponsored By Senators Reed, Davis

Survey of the retail grocery industry in Pittsburgh by the United States Department of Commerce will open Monday with five department men working under the supervision of G. E. Bittner.

Preliminary details began this week with two government workers formulating plans for the survey to reveal trade conditions. The work will take from six to eight months. The government has appropriated $15,000 to carry on the work while local interests will contribute an additional $5,000, according to the department's district manager, Wilson K. Ray.

A newly formed Pittsburgh Food Council is assisting the government agents. The survey, patterned after the Louisville survey and used by the government for nation-wide distribution of trade information, was sponsored by Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis and the Pittsburgh Association of Manufacturers' Representatives.

Committee members include: President, Charles A. Kolb; vice presidents, James V. Loughran, Donald B. Brigham and Frank M. Lillie; treasurer, Joseph C. Nevin, and secretary, Andrew H. Lewis. Findings of the survey will be applicable to many other retail trades.

THRONGS ROUT POLICE WITH TEAR GAS

New Kensington and Arnold Speed Relief Plans After Dole Seekers Storm Hall

Following the storming of the borough hall in the second demonstration within a week by an armed mob of nearly 400 rioting members of the Unemployed Council of New Kensington, borough officials of Arnold and New Kensington today were to launch a program for immediate relief of unemployment.

The shouting mob, armed with more tear gas bombs than police who sought to stop them, attempted to gain entrance to the hall as Council representatives of both boroughs, the Red Cross and Salvation Army, last night met in a special session to adopt measures for unemployment relief.

FOOD, DOLE DEMANDED

They carried banners demanding free food, clothing, rent and a dole of $15 a week for married men and $10 a week for single men, as well as an additional $3 for each child. They were not dispersed until a special detail of state police was rushed from the New Kensington barracks to aid borough police, who were massed at the entrance to the Borough Building in a final stand.

Three men were held by police following the demonstration, charged with inciting to riot. The joint headquarters of the Council and National Miners' Union in Third avenue, New Kensington, was padlocked and put under police guard.

RINGLEADERS SOUGHT

The men, who Police Chief Dan Zeloyle declared were not the ringleaders, gave their names as Fred Lubrisky, 28; Nick Sanner, 48, and Frank Lubrisky, 17, all of 971 Second avenue, New Kensington. Police said that leaders, who fled at the beginning of the march on the borough hall, were being sought.

According to police the rioters were refused a permit to parade by Burgess Daniel Burns early yesterday. They were again warned by Police Chief Zeloyle last night. When police attempted to break up a gathering in front of their headquarters in Third avenue, the mob met them with their own weapons, tear gas, and successfully withstood the officers' attempt to rout them.

Children placed in the front ranks of the rioters hampered police in their charge and they were forced to fall back to the entrance of the borough hall when their supply of tear gas was exhausted.

Hotel President Reveals Tipless Dumb Waiter Device for Diners

Tipless days have dawned in the hotel dining room at least for patrons of two Worcester, Mass., hotels and all through the ingenuity of John F. Daschner, president of the Warren and Willard hotels, after a good friend had registered but did not dine.

Mr. Daschner related the novel device created for waiterless service in his hotels today while stopping at the William Penn Hotel. It is not a nickel-in-the-slot idea but an order-in-the-slot and presto—a full course dinner appears on the table before the diner.

A menu pad and pencil awaits the diner. A checkmark after the items desired and the order slip is placed in a slot on the table that takes it to the kitchen below. The chef fills the order, places it on a four-shelf dumbwaiter, presses a button and hydraulic power takes the trays upward and stops its journey in the center of the table. And the guest has no waiter to tip. Yes, the finger bowl arrives at the same time.

Dry Party Nominees Quit, Favor M'Govern

The Prohibition County Committee yesterday filed petitions substituting Charles C. McGovern and C. M. Barr as candidates on the Prohibition ticket for County Commissioner, according to H. Gamble, nominated for County Commissioner on the Prohibition ticket, resigned in favor of McGovern and Barr.

HUNTED BROKER DEAD IN FALL

Pittsburgh authorities holding warrants for the arrest of Milton Mackey, former real estate broker here, learned today that Mackey was killed when he fell from a hotel window in New York and that he was buried there Monday.

Detective Inspector Frank Boyd had held warrants charging Mackey, who had been in New York for more than a year, with embezzlement, false pretense, and larceny. Mackey formerly resided in Beechwood boulevard.

According to information from New York, a coroner's physician there listed the death as accidental. The body was identified by relatives who went to New York Sunday.

Braddock Man, Hurt While at Work, Dies

FIRE DAMAGES SUPPLY STORE

Building supplies, hay and grain, valued at several thousand dollars were destroyed last night when flames damaged the supply store of the W. W. Scott Company, 518 Mifflin street, Hays.

Firemen, aided by an automatic sprinkler system, confined the blaze, which threatened adjacent dwellings, to the feed store. The alarm was automatically sounded by the system. Damage to the building was estimated at $4,200.

'Bugs' Waits News Of Ribbons on Al's Silk Undies

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Another idol is shattered.

Al Capone wears silk underwear. Ouch!

That's about all the government case against Al. And that's no crime, even if they prove it.

We thought he was the world's champion gangster until the evidence suddenly switched from guns to lingerie.

The underwear evidence certainly knocks our hero off the monument. We thought tough guys didn't wear any.

If that's the kind of a trial it is, Al can vamp the jury by raising his trousers leg a trifle and showing his ankle to the susceptible jury.

There may be ribbons on it.

The program also was to include an exhibit of Kovar, a new alloy with a high strength at high temperatures, and Hipernik, a new magnetic alloy used in transformers.

Developments in photophone and television were also to be exhibited, as well as the results of 15 years of study of the magnetic properties of silicon steel, an investigation which has cost several hundred thousand dollars.

LUNCHEON ARRANGED

The visitors were to be welcomed by S. M. Kintner, vice president of the Westinghouse Company, followed by the tour of the laboratory and luncheon.

The high power laboratory, the vertical parking elevator, each unit of which parks 24 automobiles in a ground space of 16 by 24 feet and a height of 116 feet, and the high voltage laboratory at Trafford were also to be inspected.

CHIEFS STUDY PLANT NEEDS

New branches of industry for the Pittsburgh district, particularly in the Pymatuning Dam aera, are being studied by the Greater Pennsylvania Council, members of the Society of Industrial Engineers were told with the opening today of the National convention in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Need for proper statistics to give industries reliable information in selecting plant sites was cited by Dr. Charles Reitell, of Pittsburgh, director of the council. Explaining the state was being studied as a whole, Dr. Reitell cited the Pymatuning Dam area as an example. He said:

"The council seeks to find what types of manufacture are most appropriate for this region. We are not thinking only about the extension of the iron and steel manufactures that have long flourished along the Shenango and Beaver rivers, but are investigating new branches of industry appropriate for this region."

CANAL SURVEY EXPERT DUE IN CITY

New Physical Study Planned Of Lake Erie-Ohio River Route; Cost Slash Seen

George Massey, representing the Randolph-Perkins Company, of Chicago, which has been engaged to make a new survey of the route of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal, was to be in Pittsburgh today to discuss preparations for the survey.

Massey, with George M. Lehman, was to go over the situation in detail in a series of conferences expected to end late tomorrow. Lehman is chief engineer for the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board of Pennsylvania.

Results of former surveys were to be discussed. The work is to consist of a new physical study of the route, which will be coupled with a survey of economic costs and conditions adjusted to present standards. Former estimates of cost, ranging in the vicinity of $100,000,000 for the 101 miles of the canal, will be radically reduced, it is thought.

The proposed canal will follow a route up the Beaver and Mahoning rivers and across country to the vicinity of Ashtabula, O.

COUNCIL TO ACT ON PLAN FOR 6,000 JOBS

Reppert Asks $420,000 To Carry Out Project With Emergency Group

Six thousand unemployed men would be given work during the coming winter months if Council approves the Public Works Department's emergency unemployment program, Chief Engineer Charles M. Reppert, said today.

Of this number, 2,000 would be employed on sewer, street and retaining wall projects from November 2 to November 30, and 4,000 from December 7 to March 17, 1932.

The work, according to Reppert, would be done with the assistance of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, with whose help thousands of men were given employment last winter.

Estimated cost of the project for 1931-1932 would be $840,000. Of this amount the city would spend half, $420,000, for tools and materials. The men would be employed and paid by the association.

There is now available for immediate use $75,000, and, according to Reppert, $120,000 of a recent $420,000 councilmanic bond issue will be available November 1. After the first of next year it will be necessary for Council to appropriate $250,000 to continue the relief, Reppert said.

Council will act on the suggestion at a meeting of the Finance Committee today.

POLICE DEFEND AUTO ARRESTS AT VIADUCT

Motorists Denounce Failure To Warn of Change; Only Enforcing Law, Sleuths Say

Serving of summonses on motorists for alleged violation of the traffic rules beneath the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad viaduct at Greenfield and Second avenues was defended by traffic policemen today despite protests of residents of the district, who charged the practice was unfair.

Steel piers separate the three traffic lanes beneath the viaduct. The outbound lane is closed because of repairs. Those protesting the action of police declared that when the outbound and street car lanes were being repaired, all automobile traffic was diverted through the inbound line.

With the street car lane repaired, many motorists bound for Greenfield and Hazelwood continued to use the inbound lane. Without warning, motorcycle policemen were detailed a few days ago and as a result, drivers declare, more than 50 summonses were served. The motorists were charged with reckless driving. One of those arrested said:

"The police could have extended the motoring public a little courtesy by placing a sign on the viaduct that automobiles were expected to follow through the street car line."

The policemen, in upholding the serving of the summonses, said they were doing no more than enforcing the state automobile laws which order the driver to keep to the right unless otherwise directed.

BOOK EXPERT AIDS LIBRARY VISITORS

Diagnoses Cultural Needs Then Prescribes Course; Backed By Buhl Foundation

There are doctors of medicine and metaphysics, matrimony and modes to cultivate Pittsburghers in those various arts and sciences.

Now along comes Charles W. Mason—doctor of culture.

He sits in a little office on the first floor of Carnegie Library in Oakland. A girl with school books, a brawny mill worker, a fussy little clerk—one by one stop in to see him. He chats with them for an hour—or a half—whatever time it takes.

Then he prescribes for their ailments—books, peculiar books ordinary books, text books, psychology books or fancy books. He's the doctor of books, who is trying to help Pittsburgh minds get on their way to culture, or develop them vocationally.

Mason is perhaps the first to attempt a public "father confessor" role in the demand of the minds of the ambitious. His experiment is financed by the Buhl Foundation. It is built on the premise that there are people who want to improve their minds, but have no cultured or practically educated advisor who can direct their mental development. The experiment, so far, proves there are. Many bashful men, conscious of their lack of education, have come to him for guidance.

A number of women have asked his help. He questions them; sometimes is able forthwith to prescribe, but more often tells them to return. Some have made as many as 15 return trips, each getting a new series of books, Mason said.

Mason, a graduate of Michigan State College and Buffalo University, is a son of the late Rev. L. Walter Mason, pastor of the First Unitarian Church here.

SEXTON PUSHES RE-TRIAL PLEA

BEAVER, Pa., Oct. 14.—Counsel for H. Clay Sexton, Beaver broker, and E. A. Ford Barnes, Pittsburgh accountant, at liberty under bonds of $5,000 each since convictions on charges of fraudulent conversion and conspiracy, has filed additional reasons why the men should be granted new trials.

Fifty-eight reasons were filed in behalf of Sexton by Attorneys Edward Coll, Pittsburgh, and Forest G. Moorhead, Beaver. Thirty reasons were filed on behalf of Barnes by Attorneys R. A. and James Balph, Pittsburgh, and William Coughlan, Beaver.

Most of the reasons charge error on the part of the court in admitting and barring certain testimony. The two defendants were accused by Mrs. Vye S. Thompson, widow of Col. "Joe" Thompson, and Mrs. Jean P. Dawson, society matrons of Patterson Heights, of withholding a fee of $4,500 assigned by Sexton to the two women.

KANE REJECTS NOTED LAWYERS

KANE, Pa., Oct. 14.—(INS)—Prof. Elisha Kent Kane, University of Tennessee instructor, charged with the murder of his attractive young wife at Hampton, Va., has decided to refuse all offers from prominent attorneys the nation over eager to undertake defense of his case, members of the family announced today.

Instead, Attorney E. Kent Kane, of Bradford, Pa., his cousin, guiding figure for the defense in preliminary proceedings, and Attorney J. Winston Read, of Newport News, Va., who aided in the early proceedings, will defend the teacher charged with the "deliberate" drowning of his wife.

Attorney Kane also announced that Betty Dahl, the "mystery woman" in the case, said to have been the author of romantic letters sent to Kane, has promised to testify for the defense if needed. Prof. Kane is staying at the estate here of his father, Dr. Evan O'Neill Kane, prominent surgeon.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin, Radio Editor

TWO NAMES EARLY associated with radio are teamed tonight on WCAE at 8:30 in selections from the "Prince of Pilsen" and Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet"—Gladys Rice and Doug Stanbury, who sang not long ago on the stage of a downtown theater. Phil explains where he has been! . . . provides the orchestral entertainment for a special broadcast on WCAE at 9 featuring Lew White, organist, and the Mendelssohn Glee Club. . . . Jerome

Darrell V. Martin

Kern takes the WCAE spotlight at 9:30 with Olive Palmer and The Revelers singing . . . Palmer-Cox's . . . also her interpretations of Herbert Nevins . . . including "Mighty Lak a Rose" . . . Gus Edwards and His Gang add a spice of hilarity to the WJAS bill at 10 . . . WCAE has another attractive presentation at 10:30 with Hans Anderson of Notre Dame and Lewis James telling the stars . . .

* * *

We went to a "Sherlock Holmes Party" the other night . . . when the creepy tones of the broadcast floated from the receiving set, the host turned out the lights . . . Dr. Watson and the immortal Holmes seemed acutely real in the darkness . . . by the way, the new feminine voice in this series opposite that of Lucille Wall is that of Edith Meiser, who also writes the script . . .

WNBO Eyes City

John Brownlee Spriggs, operator of WNBO, Silver Haven, Pa., applied to the Federal Radio Commission today for authority to erect a 5,000 watt daytime station in Pittsburgh to operate on 800 kilocycles, the clear channel now assigned to WBAP, Forth Worth and WFAA, Dallas. Spriggs proposes to use studios established almost a year ago in the Hotel Henry.

* * *

Coincident—Jack Ostfeld, KQV tenor, was singing "Mary Lou" over WSMK, Dayton, O., one day, when a listener called and said she had WSAI in Cincinnati and WSMK in Dayton on two different sets in her home, and that a soprano was singing "Mary Lou" on WSMK—both in the same key, the same time, so that it sounded like a duet . . . Ripley!

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Question a Day:

We're pretty certain that someone took Freeman Gosden's place (Amos) in Amos 'n' Andy the last couple nights. Also that Joe White is singing the songs in the Goldbergs. Tell us we're right so we can settle a lot of arguments around here.—The Girls, West Penn Hospital.

Answer—Gosden has been suffering with larynx trouble. An NBC microphone has been installed at Gosden's bedside where he and Correll (Andy) have "carried on" during his illness. There has been no substitute. Joe Kalini and not Joe White sings the role of "Joe the Ice Man" on the Goldbergs.

A Cuban admirer of Riggs and Moke recently spent $1.16 in air mail stamps to send them a 50-cent package of choice Cuban cigaros . . .

NBC has scored a tremendous victory in Chicago . . . six of the 27 stations there—WMAQ, KYW, WENR, WLS, WIBO, WCFL—are to carry their programs after November 1 . . . at the same time, WGN, a pioneer NBC outlet in Chicago, changes horses and goes CBS. . . .

Forty people have applied for Francis C. Owen's announcing job at WJAS . . . Paul J. Miller is said to have the inside track.

Show Goes On

FREEMAN GOSDEN

Freeman Gosden, who plays Amos' role in Amos 'n' Andy, is plenty sick in his Lake Shore Drive home, Chicago. The last four network broadcasts have been picked up from his bedside. His partner, Charles J. Correll, who lives in the same apartment, is playing part time nurse.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 14—The high priests of radio watch incoming liners for microphone material as news photographers watch them for sleek-legged actresses bound for Hollywood.

The liners are not disappointing them. Almost every day some great name arrives, some great name worried over the international monies tangle, world peace or maybe just where his next lecture contract is coming from.

Grist for the broadcasting mills, the great names are welcomed at the studios. They offer, you see, an interlude to the interminable song-and-dance programs.

While Aylesworth has his eyes trained on H. G. Wells, the competitive Paley, scanning the ships' lists, finds a maharajah. It isn't every day the radio can find a maharajah. In fact, heretofore, we have had to hear one, if we heard one at all, from London. Paley changes the procedure, will lead the Maharajah of Burdwan to his microphones in less than 24 hours after he arrives here on October 29.

* * *

And there is the figure of Laval looming up on the decks. A prize capture, surely. It isn't every day, either, that the radio shahs find a French Premier right at hand. Laval, if he consents to talk, will, of course, show no radio partiality. But he may not want to talk. He may think Hoover, marching so regularly to the microphones, will do all the talking necessary. Yet, Laval is going to have a hard time resisting the radio men, so persuasive are they, so convincing in their assurances of 50,000,000 listeners. The Frenchman may find that 50,000,000 Americans also can't be wrong.

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause—

Does your baby have nights when he fusses, tosses and seems unable to go quickly, quietly to sleep? Look for one common cause, doctors say: A constipated condition.

To get rid quickly of accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, nothing is better than genuine time-proven Castoria.

Castoria, you know, is made especially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics of any kind.

It is mild and gentle enough to relieve a young infant's colic pains, yet is an effective regulator for children of school age.

When your baby is upset and unable to sleep, or has a little cold or fever, it is a wise precaution to give him the gentle but sure regulative help of Castoria. With regulation come relaxed comfort and restful sleep.

Keep a bottle always on hand. Children like the taste of real Castoria—which always has the name, Chas. H. Fletcher, on the package.

Chas. H. Fletcher.

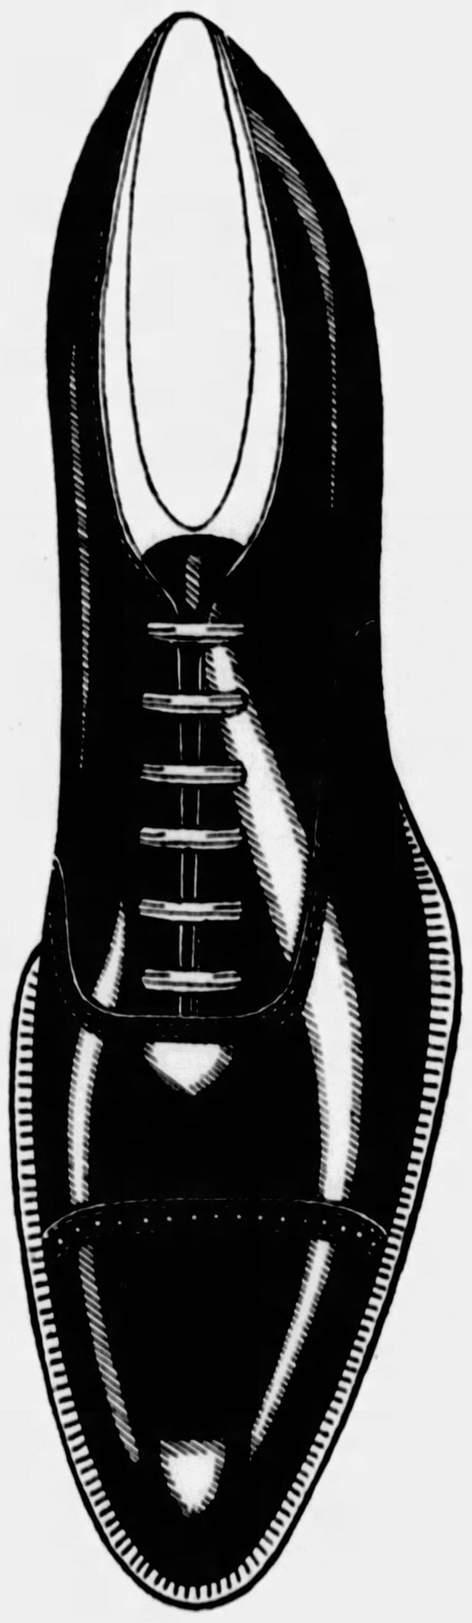
Good-Looking Footprints by

MAN-SIZED SHOES

When a man makes footprints in the "Sands of Time," he isn't interested in whether they are smart, or unusual, or any of those things. Quality and Value are his standards. And this season men are going to find that now, more than ever before, they can buy shoes of good quality at prices that put them in a class of unquestionably excellent values! The man who buys shoes today will be well content that the reasonably priced shoes he purchases are the same qualities as those for which he had to dig deep in his pockets during past years. And their good looks are as notably 1931 as their low price!



For years shoe merchants have been chalking up high scores with men on account of their fine leathers . . . the walking comfort of their shoes . . . their incomparable last. Today they are doing it again . . . with present low prices coming in for a large share of comment. A reading tour of this paper will convince men that the shoe stores and department stores advertised here, are making every effort to give them the highest quality at the new low-price standards.

PLAYING PILOT SURVIVES IN FONSECA

WHEN ROGERS HORNSBY obtained Bill Herman for his own place in the Cub lineup next year, and the Detroit club decided to drop Bucky Harris, it meant the passing of the only remaining managers in the major baseball leagues who had been listed as playing pilots. However, the big loops will not be without at least one playing manager in 1932. That much is certain, even if bench skippers are appointed to succeed Harris, Jewel Ens and possibly Wilbert Robinson.

Lew Fonseca

For Lew Fonseca, taking the place of Donie Bush as manager of the White Sox, announces that he intends to continue as an active participant in his club's games. He will not return to first base, saying that Lu Blue will not be moved as long as he plays as well there as he did this year. But unless he finds a better man for the job, it is Fonseca's plan to play left field, as he did in 1930 for the Sox, so for another season, at least, the playing general will not become extinct.

IN VIEW OF the fact that Urban Faber was frequently mentioned for the Sox managerial post, and then failed to get it, some baseball men have expressed the opinion that Faber may soon be given his freedom for the sake of harmony. Fonseca is mum on that point. His only plans at present are to move Luke Appling to third base and to try Billy Sullivan and Carey Selph at second. Sullivan will not report until May, as he is back at Notre Dame continuing his law studies.

This is not the first managerial venture of Fonseca. Fearing he would not have much of a chance with San Francisco when the Seals picked him off the lots in 1920, he jumped that club and became manager of Smithfield, Utah, in an outlaw league. He lost his first three games as a pilot and was told that if he lost the fourth he'd be fired. His team stepped out and won the next 16. Lew ought to know considerable about the best points of the various managerial systems, as he has played under six skippers in the majors—Moran, Hendricks, Fletcher, McCallister, Peckinpaugh and Bush.

ASIDE FROM HIS action in drafting Eddie Moore, one-time Pirate, from Oakland, and Pitcher Herman Bell, 32 years old, from Rochester, John McGraw continues to seek material in other directions for next year's Giants.

McGraw has just held a conference in Cincinnati with Sidney Weil, and a player deal is understood to have been the subject of the talk. The Giant boss is said to want Pitcher Red Lucas.

ADD ONE MORE to the growing list of wrong guesses as to who's going to be the new manager of the Pirates. Anybody who happens to leave one job in baseball these days is at once nominated for the Buccaneer leadership. The latest was Nick Williams, who yesterday resigned the managership of the San Francisco club in the Pacific Coast League and was immediately reported as headed this way to take charge of the Rovers. But you have the personal and official word of President Barney Dreyfuss for it that Williams is not and will not be the choice, and Dreyfuss is believed to be in fairly close touch with the situation.*

Augustin Dugas

FRANK BROWN, efficient American Association umpire and a fine judge of ball players, saw a lot of Augustin Dugas, Pirate outfielder with Kansas City this year, and pronounces the youngster an exceptional hitter.

"As a rule, left-handed pitchers make trouble for left-handed batters," Brown said, "but in the case of Dugas it is just the reverse. The southpaws are his cousins. I never saw another portside swinger who hit lefthanders as hard as Dugas does. He fairly murders them."

BROWN ALSO HAS a boost for that big, strong, silent man, Art Shires, both personally and as a ball player, and thinks Bill McKechnie made a smart move in buying him from Milwaukee. Art will be a great help to the Braves next season, Brown thinks.

"Shires is a great fellow and a fine ball player," Frank says. "He can hit, field, run and throw, is full of hustle and fight, and is in there doing his best at all times to win ball games. The other players idolize him. He's not the nut nor the braggart he has been painted. That what-a-man stuff is all on the surface. It's only showmanship. A regular guy and a great fellow is Shires. He's one of the finest men I've ever met in baseball."

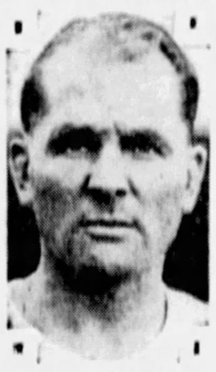
PURDUE PLAYED A football doubleheader this year and Harvard and others did it in earlier seasons. That's all well enough where there's a squad large enough to provide two teams, but imagine the limited squad of a small college being called upon to play two games in less than 24 hours. After scheduling a regular Saturday game with Manhattan, Baltimore University took on a game with Long Island University for the night before. That the step proved disastrous was not at all surprising. The Marylanders were defeated only 9 to 7 on Friday night, but on Saturday Manhattan slaughtered them 87 to 0. Such an arrangement is palpably unfair to the players when the squad is a small one. The loss of the second game is only a minor consideration. The real objection is that the contract involves a trying physical ordeal for the men and might have serious consequences.

WITH THE CONTENDERS for the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League championship equally distributed over a wide area, scholastic football fans this season are being treated to one of the most interesting races ever known in this section.

Unlike previous gridiron campaigns, when the bidders for the championship represented a mere handful of district schools, this year promises a race that will be a fight to the finish, with many newcomers challenging the reign of teams that have monopolized the honors in the interscholastic body.

AS THE SEASON nears the half-way point, a survey by Julius Levin shows that no fewer than 22 schools have records free from defeats or ties. Ten others are undefeated, but have been tied.

The depression, judging from the number of fans that turned out for the early games, coupled with the high quality of football being played by the out-of-town elevens, apparently has had no effect on the scholastic sport. In fact, it has helped to improve the game hereabouts. Many boys, unable to obtain employment, have re-entered school to continue their studies.



Elmer Carroll

THE GREATER PITTSBURGH district has four teams in the title running. Peabody, the outstanding eleven in the City League, has defeated South Hills, 13-0; Fifth Avenue, 54-0, and Allderdice, 13-0. Shady Side Academy, defending champion of the Triangular Prep School League, which also includes University High, of Cleveland, and Nichols School, of Buffalo, has two victories to its credit, having defeated St. Mary's, 28-0, and Perry, 6-0. Jimmy Robertson, former Carnegie Tech quarterback, is coaching at Shady Side. Wilkinsburg, under the coaching of Elmer Carroll, has scored four straight victories without having its goal line crossed. This team has defeated Crafton, 13-0; Sewickley, 46-0; East Huntingdon, 6-0, and Westinghouse, 35-0. The fourth member of the contending group of this district is Edgewood, which boasts two straight victories, having beaten Arnold Prep, 41-0, and Rankin, 19-0.

OPEN FACE VIEW OF WHAT HAPPENS WHEN THE PANTHER TEAM SWINGS INTO ACTION ON END RUN OFF THE SHORT SIDE OF AN UNBALANCED LINE . . . . . WHO'LL STOP IT?

The University of Pittsburgh Panthers have given three fine exhibitions of steam-roller power in their games against Miami University, of Ohio, Iowa and West Virginia University so far and appear to be in for one of their greatest seasons. Here's how they look going through the motions of a reverse play. Photo was taken in practice and gives the reader a view of the action unobscured by a defending line. Rip Collins, the right end, already has started down the field, which is why only 10 players appear in the group. Note Milligan, guard, and Quatse, tackle, swinging back into the interference. Heller will carry the ball on this play. He is the left halfback and will run around right end. Reider is the right half, Hogan the quarter and Clark the fullback and ball feeder. Capt. Hirschberg is the left end, MacMurdo and Quatse are the tackles, Morris and Milligan the guards and Daugherty the center. Certainly looks as if the boys mean business and are going to town, doesn't it? That is, after the first impression, which is that the boys are merely running around in circles. Pitt plays Western Reserve here Saturday.

CHARITY GAMES BOOSTED

GEORGETOWN LINEUP IS CHANGED

By JESS CARVER

According to the press agent at Georgetown University, the Hoyas were subjected to a terrific physical lacing in the game with New York University's Violets last Saturday, and hardly figure to be at the peak for the game here Friday night with the Dukes.

If I didn't know that New York has one of those big, bruising teams, and know how it must have cheered Chick Meehan to see his team wallop Georgetown so mightily last week, I'd put the Georgetown wails down as so much hooey. But I know how much Meehan wanted to take Georgetown by a big score, and I also know what a tough ball club Chick has.

BRADLEY LOST

It seems that the most serious loss suffered by the Hoyas (Georgetown to you) was that of Dick Bradley, former Connellsville High grid* and track star. Bradley wasn't injured during the game. Last Friday, the Hilltoppers (Georgetown again) staged a workout in the Yankee Stadium in New York. Bradley went dashing out to take a pass. He tripped, took a header, and fractured a collar bone, putting him on the bench for the remainder of the season. What a break, to have a star back bunged up in signal practice.

Two other Hoya backs were injured in the ball game. Donoghue and Gellis suffered shoulder and leg injuries and it is doubtful if they'll be able to go here Friday. Coach Tommy Mills is figuring on shifting King, the stellar quarterback, to one of the halves and inserting Mickey Lione at quarter. You see, the ace of the Georgetown backfield, Russell Danieu, was so badly hurt in the game with Western Maryland that he watched the New York University tussle from the sidelines.

The Georgetown-Duke game is the big game of the week hereabouts. Tech is idle and Pitt has only a setup in Western Reserve on Saturday. If you think the Dukes were satisfied with the 12-0 score to which they held

YOUNG'S PLAN SUPPORTED BY COLLEGES

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(INS.)—The request of Owen D. Young, of President Hoover's relief organization, that colleges devote receipts of one football game to relief work, brought favorable responses from many colleges and universities today.

Penn, Chicago, Southern California, Illinois, St. Mary's, California, Northwestern, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio State, Detroit and Wesleyan U., of Middletown, Conn., expressed willingness to co-operate.

Yale, Temple and Villanova said that their attitude would be announced later, but hinted that it would be favorable.

Maj. John L. Griffith, Western Conference commissioner, said that the Big Ten rules had been amended to provide for an extra game for all members, and that he expected these extra games to raise a sum of not less than $1,000,000.

New York University said:

"From a financial standpoint it is impossible for New York University to devote the proceeds of one of its regularly games for such a purpose."

Local Sentiment

The sentiment among Pittsburgh district colleges with regard to Owen Young's plan to have all colleges and universities play at least one football game this fall for the relief of the unemployed is not favorable.

Virtually all of the athletic heads were skeptical about the prospects of making such hastily arranged affairs profitable, and the failure of the Carnegie-Wash.-Jeff. game arranged for the same charity last fall at the Stadium was cited as a case in point.

W. DON HARRISON, athletic director, University of Pittsburgh: Owen Young's plan is a fine thing to think about, but it may not prove as practical as appears on first thought. Our experience has been that you have to have something big and especially appealing to make a success of a benefit. Local conditions always must be considered. The Carnegie Tech-W. & J. game last year, played for the unemployment fund, proved a failure, and it had the support of the Mayor, City Council, all

READY FOR SCHMELING AGAIN—SHARKEY

GOB PRAISES GAMENESS OF PRIMO

By JACK SHARKEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 — They can now bring on Max Schmeling.

I feel I shall lick the German even more decisively than I did Primo Carnera in our 15-round bout at Ebbets Field.

I guess Ebbets Field and October 12 must be lucky for me. It was on October 12, 1926, in Ebbets Field that I first attracted attention when I licked Harry Wills in 15 rounds. Five years later I got a thrill out of crushing another ring giant.

Jack Sharkey

The newspaper boys still are talking about that fourth round. That was the session in which I dropped Carnera with a savage left hook to the chin. The Italian giant got up at the count of six. I was on top of him at the time and prepared to hit him again when he dropped to the canvas without taking a blow.

PRIMO TAKES LACING

Primo was confused and didn't know just what to do. Under the rules of boxing he lost when he went down without getting hit. I started for my corner believing the bout was over. Johnny Buckley stopped me as I was about to leave the ring. Carnera had not been disqualified and got up at the count of seven.

I then got back into the thick of the battle. I had Carnera in poor condition from left hooks to the chin when the round ended.

In the fifth frame I tried to stop Carnera with rights to the jaw but was not quite able to do so.

AVOIDS CLOSE QUARTERS

I boxed at long range as much as possible as I didn't want to give Carnera a chance to use his tremendous strength.

I found that by directing my attack to Carnera's body, I could bring his guard down. I then would shift my attack to the head and nail Primo with left hooks or right hand punches.

In the fifteenth round I threw everything I had into my attack. Carnera backed away under the fury of my drive. I nailed him with left and right hand belts to the jaw.

I got a thrill out of winning, but I wish to praise Carnera for the fine stand he made against me. He is one of the most courageous heavyweights I have met. Give him another year of experience and he will be even a greater heavyweight than he is now.

It is my intention to keep active in the ring. Of course, I would prefer meeting Schmeling again, as I know I can lick him. Max, however, has refused to go through with the return contest he promised me after our last bout.

If Schmeling continues to sulk in his tent, I shall take on Tommy Loughran, Mickey Walker and some of the other American heavyweights who are not afraid to fight.

BURNS OPPOSES WEST VIEW

By TOM BIRKS

Many sandlot fans no doubt will wend their way to Parnassus High School Field tonight to watch Dan Burns and West View battle in a West Penn Independent Conference game, which is to begin at 8:15. Both clubs are eager to wipe out their defeats of last Sunday.

Fumbles and intercepted forward passes had much to do with the Burns defeat, and Al Dunn, one of the real minds of the game, promises something new when his players trot out.

Frankie Politz, quarterback, is likely to be given a free hand with West View this evening. The Parkers looked fine against East Pittsburgh, when the former Brownsville star ran the plays to suit himself.

The West View line compares with any in the conference, and if Politz gets the backfield working, the Red and White might turn in a victory.

One conference game will be staged on Sunday. The Rooneys clash with East Liverpool at Bridgeville. Last night, Coach Cutler sent the Pottery club through a strenuous workout.

In preparation for the game Rooney will have a practice session tomorrow evening. Art has been in New York but gets back today to watch the team in action. Rooney is keen to go through the conference season without being beaten.

MY LIFE STORY

CHAPTER III.

When I got that first real professional job with the Guthrie team in the Oklahoma State League in 1924 I was hoping I'd maybe get good enough to advance to a higher league a while later, but, folks, I sure never did think I'd get into the big leagues; no, sir, I never did think that. Those big leagues—Cobb, Ruth, Hornsby, Frisch and the others—seemed to be way, way up high in the places where I was sure I'd never even get close to.

The only money I ever got for playing ball before they agreed to give me that $125 a month at Guthrie was when they would slip me $5 a game sometimes for playing with the Kelly Jewelers in Oklahoma City. I guess that $125 the folks paid me at Guthrie was wages about as low as they ever did pay anybody, but I tell you it seemed like I was sort of stealing when I took that kind of big money from them for doing nothing but having a million dollars worth of fun playing baseball.

When I put on their uniform for the first time I just couldn't help but feel that I had "arrived." after what seemed to be a thousand years of hoping and trying I got to thinking back about the kid-days when I first wanted to be a real ball player, of the later ones when I got myself a job selling peanuts and pop in the Oklahoma ball park just to be near the game, of the time when they made me the proudest kid in the whole state when they let me be the bat-boy and later on go into the outfield and "shag" the fly balls.

ELATED AT ADVANCE

It certainly was great to be a league player after all that time I was working up as an amateur, then as a $5 once in a while semi-pro, and I certainly made up my mind that I wasn't going to flim the folk in Guthrie. I sure was out to give them a fair deal and I was trying all the time to help them win. But, like as before, I was so blamed anxious to put out the other side all by myself that I kept the other infielders and some of the outfielders cussing me plenty for getting mixed up in their play.

It maybe seems as if I am sort of boasting about how fast I was when I say that when I was playing second I was pretty near always right alongside the center or right fielder when they made the catch on high fly-balls, but it is all true. Of course, I would do that only when there was no one on base. If any of the enemy was on base then I'd stick right to the sack and aim to get them in one way or another.

We didn't have such a bad club at Guthrie, but the town didn't seem to go very much for baseball that year and the club dropped out of the league late in the spring. So did the Duncan team. Our boys figured out what was best to do and at last we decided to go barnstorming, but the pickings weren't much good and we hardly were able to pay expenses, so we gave up that tour, and it seemed like as if I just was all through as a league ball player when the Birstow team in the Oklahoma League decided it would take a chance on me and I was loaned to them for the rest of the season of 1924.

SOLD TO GREENVILLE

Some of the men that had seen me play for Guthrie and Bristow told somebody at Greenville, Tex., which was in the Texas State League, that I was a fair sort of player and so before the 1925 season began I was sold for $300 to Greenville. I don't know who got that $300, but whoever got it must have thought that he put a fast one over on Greenville, because I was thinking that way, too. I didn't figure I was worth any $300 to anybody, but so long as Greenville paid that much for me I said to myself that I'd bust a leg, if I had to, to prove to them that they weren't cheated too bad.

I did some pitching for Greenville, played the outfield in pinches, but most of the time I was at second base. I played 98 games for those fellows and I was socking the ball good, but I wasn't much shucks at fielding. I was always so anxious to make a play that I'd snatch at a ball before it was "ripe," and I'd bobble on the stop. Or if I wasn't doing that, I was throwing 'em wild every so often.

The records which the Cardinals dug up about me from some fellow in Texas and which have been passed around lately to newspapers, show that I made 103 runs, 127 hits, 18 homers, stole 38 bases, and batted for .339 in those 98 games. They also show that I made 33 errors and was fielding for only .922, which is terrible low in any league.

I would like to say that the history of me which has been given to newspapers is a little twisted. It shows that I started with Ardmore in 1923 and went to Greenville in 1924. I never played at Ardmore, but I did play against Ardmore while with Guthrie. The year 1923 is not right. It should be 1924 when I started.

I was mighty glad over being able to hit so good with Greenville, but I certainly wasn't glad over that fielding. Of course, I was trying for every ball, no matter where it went, and I was getting errors on some rip-snorters that could have been scored as hits. Still, and all, I was not satisfied with my playing and I didn't think I was getting along so good when what happens one day is this:

I. K. Wise, the owner of the club, calls me in and says:

"I just sold you to the St. Louis Cardinals."

Folks, that was the nearest I ever come to fainting.

Mayor May Ban School Team If It Drills Sunday

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 14.—(INS.)—Aroused by protest a projected practice session Sunday morning of the high school football team, Mayor George J. Bates has threatened to abolish the eleven.

The Rev. Cornelius P. Trowbridge, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, had protested against an order for practice, alleged to have been given by Head Coach Arthur R. W. (Bill) Broderick.

"The church has one morning a week in which to work for the moral and spiritual upbuilding of our young people," said the clergyman.

GOLFERS MOURN GREIG'S DEATH

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

One of the most prominent men in local golf in recent years, Dr. Thomas George Greig, a member of the board of governors at the South Hills Country Club, is being mourned by golfers throughout the district. Following a long illness, Dr. Greig died Monday night at his home, 22 Clifton boulevard. For years he had been keenly interested in golf, as a player and as an executive, and his loss unquestionably serves South Hills a severe blow.

D. & E. STAR LOST

ELKINS, W. Va., Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Lester Corrine, star halfback of Davis and Elkins Scarlet Hurricane football squad, now rated as the highest scoring team in the East, will not be able to make the trip to New York this week-end, Coach Sam Henderson has announced. The Elkins lads are to play St. John's College, of Brooklyn, at Ebbets Field Friday night. Corrine, who suffered a leg injury in the contest with Dakota Wesleyan two weeks ago, was unable to play last week, and physicians say he will be out at least two weeks more.

Boxing Commissioner Dr. W. D. McClelland at noon today ordered oMtor Square Garden to call off its Jackie Rodgers-Tommy Paul main bout scheduled for next Monday night, because it follows only three nights after Paul's bout with Andy Martin, of Boston, in Buffalo. Friday night, whereas the State Athletic Commission's rule is that five days must elapse between main bout participations.

Matchmaker Jules Beck said he would get to work at once on a new card.

The attention of the Commission was called to the violation of the rule by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph following three successive poor windup bouts at the Garden, and in view of the fact that there was a possibility that Paul might pull out of next week's show because of injuries or indisposition following the Buffalo battle. The five-day rule is designed to prevent such eventualities.

THREE BAD WINDUPS

Forcing contestants in the main bouts to make impossible weights ruined two of the three windups so far held at the Garden, while a bad match made a shambles of another. Commissioner McClelland acted to protect the fans against the possibility of another fiasco by enforcing the rules anent next week's card.

Tony Herrera and Joey Goodman were the principals in the main bout of the opening show at the Garden. It was a "natural," long sought by local promoters, but Goodman was forced to come in at weight that left him stale and weak and unable to fight his customary battle, and Herrera scored a hollow victory. The following week, Lou Paluso, a washed-up veteran, was served up as a sacrifice for tough Frankie Bojarski, of Erie, who finally put him out of his misery with a couple of knockdowns in the fifth round, on the second which Paluso wisely decided to call it a night.

FANS INDIGNANT

Last Monday night, Johnny Datto, of Cleveland, made such a miserable showing against Mose Butch in the main bout that the commission held up his purse pending a hearing yesterday, at which it was learned that he had weakened himself so severely making weight in the final hours before weighingin time in the afternoon that he should have been in a hospital bed rather than in the ring.

Indignation among the fans over the outcome of these bouts resulted in the only action Commissioner McClelland possibly could take to protect the interests of the public. Hereafter there will be no more matches at killing weights and the five-day rule between main bouts will be rigidly enforced.

Between Rounds

The first amateur boxing show of the season at the Keystone A. C. will be held Friday night. A team from the Willow Club will be pitted against one from the Pittsburgh Boys' Club.

Billy Jones, Negro light-heavyweight star, and Joe Rasnick will box the semi-final to the Tommy Loughran-Johnny Risko bout at the Arena in Philadelphia next Monday night.

Old Tom O'Rourke has two heavyweights under his wing—Harold Mays, of Jersey City, and Jerry Favoire, of New York. Harold has been around some time, while Jerry is only 22 years old.

The card is complete for Jim McGirr's show in McKeesport tomorrow night. Battling Ozzy and Jackie Dugan box the main bout of 10 rounds. Young Rudy and Marty McHale are in the eight-round semi-final, and Patsy Heenigan meets Charley Vingevich and Tony Marino engages Georgie Tomasky in the six-round preliminaries.

Ruth May Quit To Become Pilot In Two Years

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth wants at least two more years in baseball as a player to round out an even 20.

"And then," he said, putting his hand on the shoulder of Charles (Gabby) Street, manager of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, "I'll probably try to do like Gabby is doing. "I'll be telling other players how it ought to be done."

The New York Yankee slugger was here to play an exhibition game last night which was canceled because of rain. He attended a luncheon given in honor of Street by a business men's club.

HOYAS NEXT FOR DUKES

Wesleyan last Friday, guess again! The coaches might have been tickled, though I doubt it, and if they were, it was because the score was not greater.

The Dukers suffered the loss of a pretty good end, Krankota, in scrimmage Monday, which won't help 'em much Friday night. Krankota suffered a fractured jaw, so the x-ray pictures revealed, and will not be available for duty this week.

The large Pittsburgh alumni following of Georgetown University will have an opportunity to hold a reunion with the football representatives of their school tomorrow afternoon and night. The Hoya team, together with Coach Tommy Mills, his assistants, team physician, trainers and managers will get into Pittsburgh tomorrow afternoon. The Georgetown gridders will make the Pittsburgh Athletic Association their headquarters.

Western Reserve hardly is optimistic over the outcome of the game with Pitt. Coach Tom Keady is far from sap enough to imagine, even for an instant, that his Red Cats have an outside chance with Pitt. Keady, a smart football man, is building for the future, and as a result, will show a flock of sophomore material here this week.

For Pitt, Coach Jock Sutherland plans to use a revamped lineup, which will include th rip-snorting soph, Mike Sebastian, at halfback. Sebastian will be in there in the stead of Bulldog Reider. On the line, John (Clover Kicker) Meredith, Jack Love and Cheesio Onder will get their chance as starters. These lads, sophomores all, need polish on the offense (their defensive play is quite satisfactory) and the Reserve clash will afford 'em just the opportunity they've been seeking.

Although relations between the schools remain of the friendliest nature, Carnegie Tech and Georgia Tech, which have just completed a two-year home-and-home contract, will not renew their pact, it has been announced. A successor to the southerners has not been announced.

WILSON MAY PLAY

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 14.—Head Coach Amos, of Wash-Jeff, thinks Stew Wilson, stellar fullback, hurt in the Marshall College game last Saturday, will be able to play against Western Maryland at Baltimore Saturday. It was feared he would not be able to return for two weeks.

His injuries are not as severe as first expected. Wilson did not participate in the daily practice and may not work out much during the week in an effort to have his experience and skill available against Harlow's men.

BUC MANAGER IN DOUBT

The new manager for the 1932 Pirates has yet to be named, Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Corsairs, last night emphatically declaring that the latest name to be offered as a possibility as successor to Jewel Ens, Nick Williams, who resigned yesterday as pilot of the San Francisco Seals, champions of the Pacific Coast League, thus far has been unconsidered.

Dreyfuss is most eager to select the ideal man for the job, and is certain to take his time in picking him.

HINCHMAN PAYS VISIT

Bill Hinchman, chief scout for the Pirates, reported at headquarters yesterday, but stayed long enough to greet Dreyfuss and continue on to his home in Columbus, O. He also is among those mentioned as the next Buc pilot.

Possibilities also have linked the name of Carleton Molesworth, another Buc scout; Otis Crandall, coach; Arthur Griggs, chief of the Wichita, Kan., Pirate farm, and George Gibson, former manager, with the berth.

SEALS WITHOUT PILOT

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—Nick Williams, manager of the San Francisco Seals in the campaign by which they won the Pacific Coast League championship the past season, was without a baseball job today.

Williams said he had been discharged. George A. Putnam, club secretary, said Williams had resigned. The exact circumstances surrounding the severance of relations between the club and a man connected with it in some capacity for nearly 12 years, could not be ascertained.

Putnam said Williams' resignation came as a surprise to the directors. Williams said his dismissal came without warning.

Williams has been manager of the Seals since 1926. He won the pennant in 1928 and again this year. He also was scout and coach for several years.

By JULIUS LEVIN

Coach Dick Myers' Peabody High School eleven will be out to strengthen its hold on first place in the Section I race of the City League Friday afternoon when it invades Langley Field to engage Coach Grover Washabaugh's South High aggregation. Peabody has been setting the pace for City League schools this season, boasting three straight victories, two of them Section I contests.

If South upsets the dope by defeating Peabody, Schenley, under the guidance of Coach Walter Gross, will have a chance to move into first place by defeating Allderdice in their battle on the Allderdice Field. Allderdice, despite the fact it has been beaten by Peabody, has hopes of upsetting the Schenley aggregation.

FIFTH AT WESTINGHOUSE

In the other Section I contest, Westinghouse makes its league bow of the season against Coach Chester Briggs' Fifth Avenue gridders at Westinghouse Field.

A triple deadlock for first place in Section II is inevitable Friday afternoon, as South Hills and Carrick, tied for first place with one victory and no defeats, are not slated for a league contest, while Allegheny and Perry clash at Perry. The winner of this game will move into a three-way deadlock for first place.

CARRICK VS. SHADY SIDE

Ted Lyons will take his Carrick eleven to Shady Side for a non-league battle with Jimmy Robertson's grid machine. Robertson's grid eleven is undefeated so far, having won its first two games. Carrick, however, looms as its first big test of the season.

The Allegheny-Perry battle will mark the dedication of the new Perry High School field, adjacent the high school. This field is one of the best in the City League, and will be opened with appropriate ceremonies.

Through an error, the Clairton-Charleroi game, the feature attraction of the week, was announced as a night contest. The battle will be played in the afternoon at Charleroi. The kickoff will be at 2:30.

of the newspapers and other organized backing. Whether or not Pitt would participate in a game would depend upon its attractiveness and assurance that it could be put over as a big money-making affair for charity. In other words, the game would have to be a "natural," arranged by popular demand. It is easy enough to work up a lot of enthusiasm for a benefit in the beginning, but often this enthusiasm by the sponsors is not transferrable to the cash customers, who cannot be forced to buy tickets.

CLARENCE OVEREND, graduate athletic manager, Carnegie Tech—Unless you have something big, like the Army-Navy game in New York, I do not think post-season charity football games are much of a success. We tried it last year with Wash-Jeff and lost money. I'd rather pass an out-and-out contribution than bother with arranging for and staging an extra game. The plans of the local welfare committee for a house-to-house canvass is a far more sensible way of raising funds than the staging of benefit football games or shows.

JOHN HOLOHAN, graduate athletic manager Duquesne University—Duquesne will not be interested in a post-season football game for the benefit of charity. We are playing a very difficult schedule and by the time we finish we will be ready to call it quits for the year. Duquesne will do all it can toward making such a game a success, but will not be interested in any extra football games.

W. D. THEURER, graduate athletic director, Wash-Jeff—The matter of Wash-Jeff taking part in a post-season charity football game will have to be taken up with the college and athletic authorities. We will be glad to do our part, but our experience last year with the Carnegie Tech game was far from satisfactory. I cannot make a definite statement at this time.

STATE TO PLAY GAME

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 14.—(INS.)—Dr. Ralph D. Hetzel, president of Pennsylvania State College, today expressed himself as "very much in sympathy" with Owen D. Young's plan to relieve the plight of the jobless through the contributions of the proceeds of one college football game to the emergency relief funds now being raised.

Dr. Hetzel pointed out that such a plan had been put forward by the athletic authorities of the college some time ago and that negotiations for a post-season game, with the gross proceeds to aid the unemployed, already were under way.

It has not been determined which college team will take the gridiron against Penn State in the charity contest.

HARVARD SILENT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 14.—(INS.)—Whether Harvard would donate the gross proceeds of the football game or partake in a post-season game could not be learned here today. President A. Lawrence Lowell would not comment on what action would be taken other than that he was considering the matter.

The Coach's Viewpoint

By Howard Harpster

Howard Harpster

It took the Pitt Panthers somewhat longer than usual to get under way last Saturday in the game with West Virginia, but, once Dr. Sutherland's charges started clicking, there was no stopping them, and what started out to be a close and exciting football game turned into a rout . . . The defeat must have been a bitter one for Coach Greasy Neale, for it is well known that West Virginia would rather win from Pitt than from any other team on its schedule.

A week from Saturday the Pitt team takes on Notre Dame at South Bend in a game that will be of national interest . . . Last year, the Pittsburghers got off to a bad start against the Irish and took a severe beating . . . There is no question but that the game this year will be very closely contested, and, if Notre Dame thinks it is going to have another field day, it is going to be handed a big surprise.

Carnegie Tech's none too powerful team again displayed a great fighting spirit when it defeated the heavier and more experienced Georgia Tech eleven last Saturday at Atlanta . . . In a review of the game, Coach Alexander, of the Georgia team, said the phase of the Carnegie Tech play which was most responsible for the defeat of his team was the fine punting . . . Such a statement was conspicuous by the lack of a reliable kicker.

The coaches were depending upon Croft, the tackle, who was declared ineligible, to take care of the kicking duties . . . Capt. Armentrout was drafted into service when it was learned that Croft wouldn't be available and the halfback star has been handling the job in fine style . . . As a matter of fact, Army's punting drew much praise in the W. & J. game when the Tech captain held his own with Stew Wilson, the Presidents' fine kicker.

A story which is true, although it may be old, was told to me the other day by a friend who formerly lived in the South where he had watched a championship game between two Negro teams . . . The schools take their football very seriously and there always is a great amount of cheering and enthusiasm among the students . . . The day of the championship game was no exception, and the cheering section of one of the schools went wild as its star halfback ran through the rival team for three touchdowns in the first quarter.

Early in the second period the players on the losing team called time out and went into a huddle . . . The captain was seen talking earnestly to his mates, and, just before the huddle was broken he pointed to the star ball carrier of the other eleven and then to six of his own players . . . It was evident from the next play what had taken place in the conference, for it left the rival star stretched upon the ground listening to the mocking birds . . . The trainers rushed upon the field, but to no avail, for the star was dead to the world . . . They placed him on a stretcher, and, just as they were about to carry him from the field, the rival school's band struck up that never to be forgotten tune—"Bye, Bye, Blackbird."

SISLER RELEASED

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 14.—(A.P.)—The release of George Sisler, Rochester Redwings' first baseman, formerly with the St. Louis Browns, was announced today.

District Cue Eliminations

At St. Louis—Fred A. Schwartz, St. Louis, defeated Ed Reynolds, Alton, Ill., 100-65; Walter Franklin, Kansas City, defeated E. W. Moore, St. Louis, 100-45.

Pepper to Get Raise, Street Says

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 14.—(A.P.)—It's no mere gab that John (Pepper) Martin is going to draw a heavier pay envelope next year.

The pay increase for the $4,500-a-year hero of the recent world series will be "considerable," but the amount has not been decided on, Charles E. (Gabby) Street, manager of the champion St. Louis Cardinals, said here.

Street said Martin had earned a salary long before the series was played and that his work in battering the Athletics' pitchers in the post-season classic would bring a further reward.

MARKET TURNS HEAVY AFTER RALLYING

Shares Push Up Briskly For Time, but Run Into Fresh Selling; Bonds Sag

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—The stock market was bolstered for a time by a few bright spots in the mid-week business statistics today, but was unable to sustain a rally, and turned distinctly heavy after mid-day.

The market pushed up rather briskly for a time in the morning but ran into fresh selling after midday. Morning advances of 1 to 3 points were converted into losses of 1 to more than 3. Trading, as in the previous session was in small volume. The bond market developed a heavy tone along with stocks with rail issues declining moderately.

Woolworth sold up 3 points on announcement of a $2 extra dividend, but later lost its rise. An early upturn of 2 points in American Telephone was replaced by a net loss of more than 3. Miscellaneous issues losing 2 to 3 points included United States Steel, New York Central, Dupont, Allied Chemical, Johns Manville, Santa Fe, Union Pacific and New Haven. Reading, a thinly traded issue lost more than 6. Losses of a point or so were numerous.

The weekly report of freight car loadings showing the exceptional gain of 39,808 cars carrying the total to 777,837 was widely regarded as distinctly encouraging, and giving fresh hope of some belated seasonal recovery in general trade. The total was the highest of the year.

Some observers were inclined to regard the exceptionally steep upturn in the movement of freight to fears of shippers that an increase in freight rates might be granted. Nevertheless, it is not expected that if an increase is granted, it will be made immediately effective.

The weekly steel trade reviews, while reporting little change in ingot output spoke of some improvement in buying particularly from the automobile industry.

The quarterly earnings statement of American Telephone was about in line with Wall Street forecasts. While the net for September quarter of $2.11 a share was 14 cents under the quarterly dividend, the aggregate for the first three-quarters amounts to $7, or 25 cents above the dividends for the entire period.

Wall Street had for some time been forecasting an extra or increased dividend by Woolworth, in view of the addition to surplus resulting from the recapitalization of its British subsidiary. The $2 extra was somewhat better than some observers had looked for.

COTTON PRICES FLUCTUATE

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Cotton opened steady today, unchanged to 4 points lower on overnight selling orders, but showed a generally steadier tone on steady cables and reports that unfavorable weather in the Southwest was delaying ginning.

The selling continued, however, and increased somewhat after the call with some local and Wall street selling on the easier ruling of the stock market, and prices eased off to 6.16c for December and 6.47c for March, or about 9 to 11 points net lower.

December later rallied from 6.16 to 6.31c and March from 6.47 to 6.61c on covering and trade buying, but the bulge met a little more cotton and the market reacted a few points later in the morning.

At midday December was selling around 6.23c with active months showing net losses of 2 or 3 points.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 14.—Spot good business done; prices 11 points higher. American strict good middling, 5.43; good middling, 5.08; strict middling, 4.88; middling, 4.78; strict low middling, 4.63; low middling, 4.43; strict good ordinary, 4.23; good ordinary, 3.93. Tide Water Merger Reported Dropped

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP.)—It is reported here that as a result of growing opposition on the part of certain stockholders to inclusion of Tide Water Associated Oil Company in the proposed Sinclair Consolidated Oil merger all hope of including that company in the combination has been definitely abandoned.

The report could not be confirmed at the Sinclair offices, where it was said that as far as was known there the negotiations were still continuing.

Winter Wheat Hit By Bad Dry Spell

DODGE CITY, Kas., Oct. 14.—About 15,000,000 acres of the Southwest's winter wheat territory are off to the poorest start with the smallest moisture reserves ever known since this country has been a factor in wheat production. October is passing with little relief from the long dry period in the wheat belt.

MAN OF IDEAS GREAT AID IN DEPRESSION

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—At this stage of acute economic depression, the socially useful person is the man of enterprise and ideas, who can suggest practical and sound job-creating activities.

Mr. Rukeyser

Inasmuch as President Hoover has called a national housing conference for December, the accomplishments of Mr. Rabinowitz and his associates in providing modern housing facilities in place of slums for persons of small means are of immense importance to the country as a whole.

DIFFICULT ROAD

Obviously general business has been enormously depressed because of the spectacular decline in construction activity. To raise building to a higher level would give an impetus to general economic recovery. But the road toward achieving this revival of building is difficult, since in numerous cities there has already been overbuilding in many types of structures.

The guide for the coming months must be a realistic study of the law of supply and demand in housing. Mr. Rabinowitz points out that the building boom which culminated in 1929 was concerned with construction for the 30 per cent of the population at the top of the economic scale, but that virtually nothing was done since the war for the 70 per cent of the population at the bottom of the economic scale. With private funds aided and abetted by tax exemption, Mr. Rabinowitz has demonstrated that there is a demand for very cheap apartments of an improved type.

SLUM OPPORTUNITY

He thinks that there is today a vast opportunity for the use of the skill of architects and engineers and labor in the building of attractive, low-rent apartments for those with family incomes of $2,000 to $3,000—apartments renting at not more than an average $12.50 per month per room.

Under the tax exempt provision, by eliminating fees for expensive financing, by selecting cheap land, and building in accordance with the principles of mass production, it has been shown feasible to rent such apartments at 40 per cent less than would have been possible if the project had been carried on for usual profit motives by speculative builders. Further, experience has shown that speculative builders keep away from this type of activity preferring to use their brick and mortar in sections where high rents are paid by well to do persons.

Why Recovery May Be Rapid; Many Needs Await Filling; Rush to Buy Likely When Fear Fades

—By B. C. FORBES—

WHEN THE WORLD War ended many needs were waiting to be filled and the filling of them brought a business boom. Many needs are waiting to be filled today and now that the war against unreasoning fear has apparently been won, is it not entirely possible that the filling of these needs will bring another business boom?

FIRST CONSIDER instalment buying.

Instalment purchasing reached unprecedented proportions during 1928 and 1929. Then the panic put a sudden stop to the extravagant incurring of debts.

B. C. Forbes

Two years have passed. Very little reflection is necessary to convince one that a large part of the billions of dollars' worth of goods of all kinds bought on time payments during 1928 and 1929 is now unfit for further use. Such things as men's clothing, women's garments, various household furnishings have been completely consumed. Many more durable articles need replenishing.

Another moment's reflection brings out that almost everything acquired three years or two years ago has now been paid for in full.

ARE WE NOT entering a new chapter in our social and economic history a "new era" in a truer sense than the much-discussed "new era" supposed to have been ushered in by the reckless speculative boom?

Assuming that hysteria has subsided and will not again break out, is it not clear that recovery will not have to go far before there sets in a broad buying movement?

Admittedly most people were much better able to buy when the war ended than they are today. But at that, the statements of our banks reveal that savings have been rising to unparalleled sums. There is not such a dearth of funds throughout the country as there has been a dearth of confidence, dearth of inclination to buy.

Once let the will to buy overcome apprehension and we may witness a revival of activity on a scale and with a rapidity not now imagined.

ALL ALONG the social scale individuals and families really want lots of things. With jobs on the increase and working hours on the increase, there is certain to be an increase in instalment buying. Salaried employes who become convinced that their positions are secure will feel disposed to procure things for themselves and their families which they have been going without.

Business men who find losses turning into profits will likewise let the urge to buy have fuller play. Investors who have feared further reduction in income through reduced dividend and interest payments will likewise develop a buying mood when satisfied a definite turn has come for the better in security prices and in corporation profits.

WHEREAS CORPORATIONS as a rule have been buying extremely cautiously notwithstanding that their heads have recognized that many prices have been below cost of production, they are likely to act like a flock of sheep once it becomes manifest that prices are headed upwards.

Instead of carrying only enough raw materials to keep them going in a hand-to-mouth way, they will see the advisability of stocking up before the price level again approaches normal.

EVERYBODY PROCLAIMS that recovery must necessarily be painfully slow.

I, for one, cannot subscribe to that theory.

Was there anything slow about the rebound in stock quotations last week? Many jumped up 20 per cent between Tuesday and Thursday. Even bonds, usually slow-moving, advanced suddenly and vigorously.

The commodity price level, too, has been pressed so abnormally far down, and there has been such niggardly buying, that a quick snapback would be wholly logical.

IF IT BE TRUE that "action and reaction always are equal," we are ripe, having experienced such terrifically overdone reaction, for lively action.

Federal Reserve Control Separated From Banks

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

This is the third article of a series describing the workings of the Federal Reserve System and discussing the changes in its operations which probably will be suggested at the next session of Congress.

TO ADMINISTER THE USE of the new type of currency created to give flexibility to the monetary system of the United States, it was necessary to set up a large organization. The Federal Reserve act did this by dividing the country into 12 districts and providing a central bank for each.

While the individual needs of each section of the country made it advisable to have localized control, it was necessary to have each section work in harmony. Accordingly, a Federal Reserve Board was established to co-ordinate the work of the districts.

This board consists of eight members. Two of these are the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency. The other six are appointed by the President of the United States for 10-year terms with the approval of the Senate. The way this board operates in co-ordinating the activities of the districts will be discussed in coming articles.

Twelve Banks Established

IN EACH OF THE 12 districts a Federal Reserve Bank was established. While the Federal Reserve Board is a government body, the 12 banks are semi-private institutions. Their stock is owned wholly by member banks, but their policies are directed toward public welfare and not private gain. Dividends on the stock are limited to 6 per cent.

Each Federal Reserve Bank has nine directors. Three of them are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board. One of these appointees is the chairman. The other six are elected by the member banks in the district. To keep banking influence from being dominant, the law provides that, outside of the chairman, who devotes all his time to the bank, the members appointed by the Reserve Board must not be active bankers. Three of the six elected members must be engaged in commerce, agriculture or industry. This places business men, rather than bankers, in control.

State Membership Optional

ALL NATIONAL BANKS are compelled to be members of the reserve system. State banks and trust companies which meet the legal requirements can join or withdraw at their own option. About one-third of the banks in the country belong to the system, but these control about two-thirds of the banking resources.

Member banks must subscribe for stock of the Federal Reserve Bank in their district to the extent of 6 per cent of their capital and surplus. So far member banks have been called upon to pay for only 50 per cent of their subscriptions.

The stock cannot be sold or transferred. A bank which withdraws or liquidates must turn its stock back to the Federal Reserve Bank. This makes it impossible for any one institution to gain control of a Federal Reserve Bank.

System Has 24 Branches

THE 12 FEDERAL RESERVE banks are located in outstanding cities of financial importance in their districts. Since there are several important cities in some of the districts, 24 branches and two agencies also were established. Banks in this city work through a branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland. The entire system employs over 10,000 persons.

The Federal Reserve Banks do not deal with individuals. They are banks for individual banks. The way the system operates to control the volume of currency will be discussed in future articles.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The bond market declined irregularly today as trading slackened somewhat.

Selling pressure was more apparent among railroad loans than in other groups of domestic issues.

Although the treasury 4¼s of 1947-52 lost and the treasury 4s of 1954 receded, the more active issues of this group such as the first liberty 3½s and the fourth 4¼s and the new treasury 3s made moderate gains.

Foreign obligations scored narrow mixed changes as trading in most of them was dull.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Transactions of the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (sales omitting 3 zeros; interest dollars unless otherwise indicated; fractions in thirty-seconds of a point):

Soldiers Overpower Police, Escape With Food

CHAPTER XXX.

"What have you got in that parcel?" asks the gendarme.

"Half a pig's head," explains Willy frankly.

Willy does not move. The gendarme hesitates and then gives a glance at his colleague, who promptly takes up his station beside him. That is a bad mistake. Neither of them seem to have had much experience in these things nor to be used to any resistance. The second fellow ought to have been long ago that we are together, even though we have not spoken a word to one another. He should have stood off to one side and covered us with his gun. Not that that would have troubled us much—what's a revolver, after all? But instead of that, he goes and plants himself right alongside his colleagues, lest Willy should cut up rough.

The consequence becomes clear immediately. Like a lamb Willy passes up his half a pig's head. The astonished gendarme takes it from him and so becomes as good as unarmed, both hands being full. At the same instant Willy calmly lands him one on the mouth and knocks him over. Before the second can collect himself, Kosole butts him upward under the chin with his bony skull, and Valentin is already behind him, squeezing so hard on his windpipe that his mouth comes wide open. Kosole swiftly runs a newspaper into it. Both the gendarmes are now gurgling and gulping and spitting, but it is no good; there is paper in their throats and their arms are being twisted behind them and made fast with their own cross straps. It was quick business. Now, where to put them?

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted when a schoolboy, tells the post-war story of a group of friends from the same city who return home when peace is made, to find a strange new world in which they have no place. Problems of adjustment in the new regime puzzles them. They are without occupation, for the most part, and out of touch with those who had remained behind the front. Several of the group decide on a foraging expedition in the hope of getting a square meal or so. They take an early train into the country and beg food at farms, gathering enough to take back to town. But at the station they are confronted by two gendarmes, prepared to search them and take the food from them. One of the gendarmes faces Willy Homeyer, who looks deceptively meek.

Now Go On

MADE PRISONERS

Albert has the idea. Fifty yards off he has found a lonely little house in the door of which a heart has been cut—the out house. We set off at a trot. We shove the two in. The door is oak and the bolts thick and strong. It will be a good hour before they are out again—Kosole is most considerate—he even piles their bicycles in front of the door.

The other foragers have watched us apprehensively. "Grab your things!" says Ferdinand, grinning. Already the train is whistling in the distance. They look at us timidly but do not need telling twice. One old woman is quite panic-stricken.

"Oh," she wails, "you have assaulted the gendarmes; that's terrible—terrible!"

Apparently she thinks it is a capital offense. The others, too, are rather worried about it. Fear of uniforms and policemen is in their very bones.

Willy grins. "Don't carry on, Mother; even though the whole government were here, we wouldn't let them take anything from us! Old soldiers and their mesamates hand over their grub"—A nice state of affairs that would be!"

TENSION RELAXES

It is fortunate that village railway stations so often lie far from the houses, for no one has seen anything of what we have done. The station master now comes out of his office, yawning and scratching his head. We march up to the barrier. Willy with his half a pig's head again under his arm—"Me give you up?" he murmurs, stroking it fondly.

The train starts. We wave from the window. The astonished station master thinks it is intended for him and waves back. But we mean the out house. Willy leans far out, watching the red cap of the station master.

The tension relaxes in the faces of the foragers. They venture to talk again. The woman with the bacon laughs with tears in her eyes, so grateful is she. Only the girl who swallowed the butter is still weeping inconsolably. She was too hasty; and besides, she is already beginning to feel sick. But now Kosole shows what he is made of. He gives her the half of his sausage, which she tucks away in her stocking.

As a precaution we dismount at a station well without the town and cut across the fields to gain the road. We had meant to do the last stretch on foot, but encounter a motor lorry loaded with cans. The driver is wearing an army greatcoat. He lets us ride with him, and so we tear along through the darkness. The stars are shining. We squat one beside the other and from our parcels there issues a rare smell of pork.

The High Street is under a wet, silvery, evening mist. The street lamps have big, yellow courtyards of light about them.

LEDDERHOSE PROSPERS

With me is Valentin Laher. He is not complaining exactly, but he cannot forget the famous acrobatic turn with which he made such a hit in Paris and Budapest. "That's all finished now, Ernst," he says. "My joints creak like a stiff shirt and I've got rheumatism, too. I've rehearsed and rehearsed till I've dropped. It is no use trying it any more."

"What will you do then, Valentin?" I ask. "The state should give you a pension really, the same as it does retired officers."

"Ach, the State!" answers Valentin contemptuously. "The State only gives those anything that open their mouths wide enough. I'm working up a couple of turns with a dancer just now, a bit of a leg show, you know. It promises well enough as regards a public, but it's not much—a decent artist ought to be ashamed of doing such a thing, really. But then, what's a man to do? He must live."

Valentin is going now for a rehearsal, so I decide to accompany him. At the corner of Hamken street a black bowler hat goes trundling past us in the fog, and beneath it a canary-yellow mackintosh and a portfolio—"Arthur!" I shout.

Ledderhose stops. "My hat!" exclaims Valentin. "But you have got yourself up swell!" With the air of a connoisseur he fingers Arthur's tie, a handsome affair in artificial silk with lilac spots.

"Oh, yes, not so bad, not so bad," says Ledderhose, flattered and in haste.

"Don't you run the cigar shop any more?" I asked.

"Sure," he replied. "But one extends gradually. You don't happen to know of any offices to let, I suppose? I pay any price."

CHILDHOOD FRIEND

Arthur goes on.

Valentine laughs. "How they do change, eh, Ernst? What a miserable poor worm he was up the line, and now look, what a swell business man!"

"Things do seem to be going bloody well with him, though," I say meditatively.

We stroll on. The fog drifts and Wolf plays with it. Faces come and go. Suddenly in the white-clear light I see a glistening red patent-leather hat, and beneath it a face softly bloomed with the dampness, that makes the eyes shine the more brightly.

I stand still. My heart is beating fast. That was Adele! Swiftly memories spring up of other evenings when we 16-year-olds would hide outside the doors of the gymnasium, waiting till the girls should come out in their white sweaters; and then we would run after them down the streets and overtake them, only to stand before them, breathing hard, silent, staring at them—till they would break away and the chase start all over again. And the afternoons when, if we happened to meet them somewhere, we would walk shyly and stolidly after them, always a few paces behind them, much too embarrassed to speak to them, and only as they turned in at some house would we suddenly summon up all our courage and shout after them, "See you again," and run away.

Valentin looks around. "I have to go back for a moment," I say hastily. "I want to speak to someone. I'll be here again in a minute." And I run off in search of the red hat, the red glow in the mist, the bright days of my youth before uniforms and trenches.

"Adele——"

She looks 'round. "Ernst! You back again!"

DAILY SHORT STORY

Tough Guy

Ruffian Is Badly Beaten By Quiet Artist

"It's always been sort of homey and family-like here, and now Mr. Meeker has to go and give that awful Joe Blodgett a job—it sort of spoils everything!"

Sadie Ashley stared mournfully at Joe Blodgett as she whispered this to Mrs. Yeaton.

"I know, dearie," Mrs. Yeaton, forelady of the trimming department of Meeker's Book Bindery, agreed, "but what could Mr. Meeker do? This Blodgett is his wife's brother, you know."

"If I were a man and built my business myself I'd run it myself. I wouldn't have my wife buttin' in," Sadie replied.

"We got to get along the best we can," Mrs. Yeaton told her, soothingly. Mrs. Yeaton understood Sadie's real reason for complaint better than Sadie suspected. It was because Joe Blodgett, assured of a steady job because of his relationship to the owner's wife, took a great delight in announcing and demonstrating that he was a "Tough Guy!"

Moreover, Sadie might not have been so distressed if it hadn't been that Blodgett seemed to take great delight in annoying and often abusing Perley James.

Perley did the designing for the decorative and costly bindings. He was the best paid employe in this bindery that had been owned by three generations of Meekers.

And Sadie was in love with Perley. It wasn't at all because he earned such an attractive amount of money—although Sadie did not object to this—it was just because Sadie was in love with him, which is plenty of reason.

LACKS COURAGE

Perley had been in a sort of seventh heaven of bliss because Sadie smiled at him and was extremely nice to him. Some day, Perley told himself, he would get up courage to propose.

Perley was like that—a sort of younger specimen of the "Timid Soul" of the cartoon.

Then Joe Blodgett came back from South America, so Mr. Meeker said, and was put at work in the stock cutting department to learn the trade.

There was a little Meeker, aged 10. He would, his father hoped, become the fourth generation of Meekers to own this book bindery, famous among those who knew about the better sort of bindings and hand-tooled leather and original designs.

"Lissen," he announced to Graves, in charge of the stock cutting, "that stuff can wait. I got to get acquainted. Don't forget that I'm one tough guy."

HUSBAND CONSENTS

He swaggered out to look about, chin here and there and announce his identity as brother-in-law of Meeker, always adding, "Just back from South America and I'm sure one tough guy!"

Mr. Graves went in to see Mr. Meeker and to suggest that if this Blodgett chap was to work under him, he was to work, not to gad about. Mr. Meeker spoke to his brother-in-law. Blodgett sulked the remainder of the day and told his sister that evening. Then Mr. Meeker learned just where he got off from Mrs. Meeekr.

Mr. Meeker was to understand that her brother Joey had a terrible hard time of it and that he was to be treated kindly and given a chance to get acquainted and sort of acclimated.

Meeker said, "Yes, my dear," and Blodgett, in at this scene, gave Meeker the "razzberry."

Blodgett was tougher than ever after this. He did a little work now and then but at the rate he was applying himself it would take several eons before he learned the rudiments of the book bindery business.

"Horsefeathers," Blodgett replied, shoving Perley's face forward so that it bumped his nose on the desk.

That afternoon Blodgett strolled over to Sadie's department when he should have been packing the stock on the cutters.

Sadie looked up at him scornfully.

"Sure—a tough guy like me has to be brave."

"I suppose you used to fight the lions in South America bare-handed!"

Blodgett looked at her. She was quite serious. He grinned. Dames, he told himself, always fell hard for tough guys.

"Samson did."

"Don't you believe it. I never heard of this guy Samson, but if it was claimed he killed a lion bare-handed it was some press agent yarn."

"Well, I would certainly hate to live in South America where all the Lons are and where the elephants run wild. I don't see how you dared."

"I never killed no lions bare-handed, but I clubbed one to death once and I shot plenty of wild elephants, too."

"Are there many down there?"

"Babe, the woods is full of 'em in the wild part of South America, where I was."

Now and then Perley would adventure over to Sadie's bench during the noon hour and they would send out for lunches to be brought in.

One day Sadie mentioned that she guessed Blodgett didn't mean to be so annoying.

"You see he lived an awful rough life in South America, he used to club lions to death and shoot wild elephants."

SPOILS PAPER

"He did?"

"Uh huh, he told me so. He must have had an awful time down in South America."

"I'll bet he did," Perley agreed, and said no more about it.

Joe Blodgett seemed to be especially anxious to make trouble one afternoon. It used to delight him to stroll around and say to this one and that one, "I'll give you a tip — Meeker has made me general manager and I'm gonna see that there's no loafin' done here—jump into it!"

This particular afternoon he made trouble right and left. Graves was in despair because he had spoiled quantities of fine glazed paper stock by clumsiness at the cutter.

"If I were boss that would come out of your salary," Graves told him.

"Yeah? You and who else got th' nerve to do that to Joe Blodgett, the tough guy?"

Blodgett was feeling fit for more deviltry then. He inked his hand and went over to where Perley James was working on a design, all carefully drawn out. Blodgett leaned over and set his hand in the middle of this design. He started to chat with Perley.

"I'm late, have to rush this, Mr. Blodgett," Perley said nervously.

Blodgett laughed and raised his hand. The design was ruined.

"Look at what you did—how could you be so careless?" Perley cried. He was so distressed that he forgot to speak soothingly.

"Who th' hell are you to boss me?" Blodgett demanded and he grabbed Perley and rubbed his inky hands over Perley's face. Sadie saw this and walked over, her cheeks flaming and her eyes blazing.

She did not know that Mrs. Meeker had called at the bindery and at this moment had stepped out into the big workroom.

"Shut your trap, you pie-faced dumb Dora!" Blodgett yelled at Sadie, whereupon he dipped his hand into a pot of liquid glue and smeared it in her hair.

Sadie screamed but Perley James did more. The sight of glue in Sadie's pretty hair was too much for him. He grabbed up the heavy glue pot and swung it down on Blodgett's head. It floored Blodgett.

Perley sat down on Blodgett. Mrs. Meeker rushed up, followed by Mr. Meeker. Perley could see only Blodgett and Sadie's glued-up hair. Perley began to rub glue all over Blodgett's head. As he did so he talked. In part he said:

"Blodgett, you are a stuffed shirt and a tin-horn sport. You are a yellow coward and a damn liar. Also you are a crook. You were never in South America in your life—you were doing a term in prison—first there are no lions and elephants in South America and again I know all about you and your record, you cheap, bluffing crook!"

With that Perley gave Blodgett a crack with the glue pot, got up, began wiping his hands on Blodgett's clothes and at the same time he told Meeker that he was resigning.

RESIGNATION REFUSED

"You are not," Mr. Meeker said. "Blodgett is resigning." He turned to his wife. "Get your sweet brother out of here, keep him out. I don't know how Perley learned about his prison record but it's true enough, and there's no need for me to try and cover him up any longer."

Mrs. Meeker took Blodgett away.

And, after a few whispered words with Sadie, Perley went home to change his clothes because he and Sadie had to hustle down to the marriage bureau before it closed, for a license.

Schooley Under Fire

The Manner in Which the State Banking Department Is Investigating the Charges Is Reassuring.

The statement that City Treasurer Schooley complied with the law and required the Franklin Savings and Trust Company to deposit bonds as protection for the city deposits is flatly contradicted.

Moreover, the charge is made in a suit filed by the State Banking Department yesterday that Schooley had personal dealings of a questionable character with the bank.

Mayor Kline appointed Schooley City Treasurer and is responsible for Schooley's administration of the office.

In the circumstances the proper course for the Mayor would be to relieve Schooley from duty pending the outcome of the charges. Kline's failure to offer the public any sort of explanation about the matter is not reassuring.

But the Mayor is in an awkward predicament. How can he consistently suspend Schooley when he himself, although under indictment, has continued to function just as though there were nothing questionable about his own status?

Many persons, with a delicate sense of honor, would feel it was their duty, if charged with serious offenses in the administration of a public office, to entrust the management of the office to someone else until they had been cleared of the charges. But Kline and Schooley are not of that type.

Schooley's dealings with the Franklin Savings and Trust Company become more and more questionable as the facts come to light.

The vigor and promptness with which the State Banking Department, City Controller Kerr and the District Attorney have undertaken the task of clarifying the matter is reassuring. They inspire confidence that nothing that the public ought to know about this business will be concealed.

One Cause of Fraud

Not Enough Interest Is Shown in the Choice of Election Officials.

Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Chamber of Commerce, has been nominated for inspector of elections in the Nineteenth District of the Fifth Ward, his home, and his election is said to be virtually assured.

But he says he did not seek the office and will not serve if elected.

Tut, tut, Mr. Dunn! Do your civic duty. We need men like you on election boards.

One reason why there has been fraud in our elections is that the people have not shown enough interest in the choice ion officials, and honest and capable men and women een indifferent about serving on election boards, or willing.

The nomination of Mr. Dunn is a step in the right direction. It would be a fine thing for Pittsburgh if all the election boards were composed of men and women as upright and intelligent as he.

A Tremendous Demand

There Is a Far Greater Call for $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Loan Than for Banking Pool.

In his wish to protect and strengthen the great banking institutions of this country, has President Hoover forgotten the more than 6,000,000 common, every-day citizens of America who need help, too?

Financiers acclaim the President's proposal of a half billion dollar banking pool to strengthen credit, thaw out frozen collateral and stimulate business confidence again. So do all other unselfish and far-sighted Americans. It means that the government is about to do something positive and bold to get us out of the mudhole into which we have blundered.

But 6,000,000 good men, weary from tramping the streets in search of work, might well be pardoned if they raise their hands in protest and cry out to Washington, "What about US? Will this give me a job, will this feed my hungry children, will this help me RIGHT NOW?"

The President cannot say to such men, "Yes, it will help you, but you must wait patiently until the invigorating effect of my banking pool is felt in every corner of the land. Eventually, within a few months, industry will be brave again, the wheels will be turning once more and you will have a job and your children will be eating again."

The President seems to have forgotten that American prosperity drives a double team. There is capital, but there is also labor. There is money, but side by side is the workingman. Mr. Hoover cannot pull the country out of this sticky depression by helping only the bankers, he must provide assistance for the worker, too. When he devises a scheme for helping our great banking organization he aids thousands of industries, hundreds of thousands of stockholders and the benefits will be spread far and wide. Why can't he see just as clearly the widespread benefits that will come through helping 6,000,000 men who are out of work? Bankers can see the President and tell him their troubles and urge him to help. One unemployed man cannot see him, but the President ought to be able to see 6,000,000 unemployed men and to see how he can GIVE THEM IMMEDIATE HELP.

The Hearst newspapers have proposed a $5,000,000,000 national bond issue—a prosperity loan—which would create jobs in public works. Leaders in every rank of American life have approved that plan and urged the President to call a special session of Congress so that it can be put into effect at once. So far Mr. Hoover has not acceded to that demand. He understands the banker's troubles and comes swiftly to his aid; he seems to think the worker in his rugged individualism should pull in his belt another notch and wait patiently for the job he is certain to get—some time.

There is supposed to be a "demand" for a special session to pass legislation in behalf of the excellent banking pool. If Mr. Hoover will come to the front door of the White House for just a moment he will hear a far more tremendous demand for a special session to approve a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan.

Why doesn't he listen? Why doesn't he act for the workingman?

Discriminating Kisses

* * *

We might learn a lot about ourselves and each other that way.

* * *

And about the different brands and flavors.

* * *

It would be edifying to find out how much your wife has learned about kissing since you ceased bothering to teach her.

And to see how practised your husband has become in the tender art, while you were away on your summer vacation and couldn't keep tabs on him.

* * *

For instance, would a seasoned wife recognize her husband's dutiful peck out of a half-dozen sample pecks on the cheek? And would she recognize his brand of tobacco, and instantly detect an unfamiliar flavor or any strange scent of shaving soap?

* * *

Would the debutante respond more readily to the kiss flavored with romance and genuine devotion—or would she fall for the sophisticated kiss, savoring of long practice?

* * *

* * *

It would be wonderful for instance, to see if a woman could fool her husband and bring him back to life, by using a new brand of perfume and imitating her honeymoon kisses.

Or to see if a wife would faint with surprise at the touch of an ardent, impassioned kiss, after the long matrimonial abstinence.

* * *

It would be interesting to observe a modern girl's natural reactions and to discover whether she is still susceptible to the signs of love in a man's kisses, or whether a kiss has become just a matter of form to her.

* * *

And to note whether she is cold and unresponsive to all unfamiliar kisses—or if she is totally undiscriminating, and ready to be "anybody's darling."

* * *

But, the greatest surprise of all would be to see how every tired little wife would instantly recognize her own husband's morning coffee-kiss, and the abstracted kiss he leaves somewhere on her physiognomy when he returns in the evening, out of a whole world full of kisses!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I'm going to print a letter I have just received. It is not a pleasant letter. It is filled with bitterness and hate. It is, in portions, obviously uninformed and unfair. Yet it is an important letter.

It is important because this hate and bitterness is reflected throughout the country. There has always been dispute over whether married women should work. Now this dispute is becoming a fury in the minds of thousands of desperate unemployed single women and frantic wives and mothers, with unemployed husbands.

HAS A MARRIED WOMAN, WITH A HUSBAND WHO IS ABLE IN ANY DEGREE TO SUPPORT HER, THE RIGHT TO TAKE A JOB WHICH MIGHT BE FILLED BY A SINGLE GIRL OR A MAN?

"Why not, if she's more efficient than the single girl or the man?" you may say. And that was a good answer once. BUT IS IT A GOOD ANSWER NOW? What is a good answer to this letter? Read it.

"Dear Miss Robinson:

"I would like to give my opinion on the question of MARRIED WOMEN WORKING. I think that these married money grabbers should be kept in their place and that is in the home. Everywhere you turn, you see them taking the place of the single girl. How can the single girl exist in the face of this competition?

"Certainly something must be done about it. Some of the gray headed fossils they employ in offices and stores are old enough to be pensioned off, but they calmly go on with their work until they fall in their tracks. Is that fair? Is there no justice for single girls who must earn their living? Employers should lay off their married women and give the new blood a chance.

"Another thing that is ruining this country is the MARRIED SCHOOL TEACHER who hogs positions in the day and night school. It is not enough for her to be dragging down a salary by the day teaching, but she rushes over to the night school, afraid that she will lose a dollar. These teachers look dragged out and untidy. It is disgraceful to see the old wrecks that are holding the good jobs while fresh, bright young girls lack positions. It isn't only unfair to the single workers, but it is unfair to the children who need to be taught by modern methods instead of methods learned 35 years ago.

"Let the old, married office workers—the has-been teachers—take a back seat now and retire. They have a big enough pile salted away. Give the single girls a chance!

"Please publish this where it will be seen by the public and wake up our citizens.

"Los Angeles."

Well, there it is. I repeat, it's an unpleasant letter. I don't like it— don't endorse it. And yet—I understand the despair that drives a worried woman into such hateful expression. I've known despair like that once. I may know it again. It's a bad thing . . . despair like that. Bad for the whole country. Should the country do something about it? Or has the efficient woman worker a right to work, regardless of age or domestic status? What's YOUR opinion?

Cassini's Findings Are Still Studied

By Archibald Henderson

There are certain historical families in science, the successive generations of which have distinguished themselves in that branch of knowledge. Perhaps the most famous was the Bernouilli family, a line of mathematicians; and there were the three Herschels. Still another family was the Italian family of Cassini. The first one of the name to win fame in science was Giovanni Domenico, who was appointed the first director of the newly established Astronomical Observatory at Paris. For four generations members of the family of Cassini succeeded one another in that distinguished post.

The greatest of them all was the first, Giovanni Domenico, who was born on June 8, 1625, at Perinaldo, Nice. After studying under the Jesuits at Genoa, he was appointed, at the age of 25, professor of astronomy at Bologna, the most illustrious of the Italian universities. His interest in the study of the heavens was intense; and he accomplished a great many important results in astronomy, working in a field which was still comparatively new to telescopic research. Between 1671 and 1684 he discovered four of Saturn's satellites, only one having been ascribed to Saturn before his time. For this valuable contribution to our knowledge of Saturn and its satellites, Cassini has been called the man who "wrote his name on Saturn." In 1671 he discovered the eighth satellite of Jupiter, to which was given the name of Iapetur. After accepting the post of first director of the Paris Observatory, Cassini was naturalized a French subject. To his earlier life at Bologna belong his calculation of the periods of Jupiter's rotation and his observations of the transits of the giant planet's satellites, as well as his determinations of the rotation periods of Mars and Venus.

Cassini made a special study of the "libration" of the moon, giving a complete theory of this libration, namely, the laws of variation of the moon axis. He prepared tables of Jupiter's satellites and their revolutions round the planet. He worked out more accurate values for various astronomical constants, in particular the proper value of the eccentricity of the earth's orbit, which determines its exact path, improving on the value used by Kepler. In the analytic geometries of today are still studied the famous oval curves he designed, known as Cassini's ovals. He died, famous and honored, on September 11, 1712.

Important Young Mother

THE LOVELY PRINCESS OTTO BISMARCK WITH HER LITTLE BOY AND GIRL.

This charming young woman, Danish by birth, wife of Prince Otto Bismarck, secretary in Germany's London Embassy, may be talked of many years from now.

Her little boy and girl, Ferdinand and Marie Anne, are the great-grandchildren of the powerful Bismarck who created the German Empire, making his Prussian King, old William, Emperor of all Germany, only to be thrown overboard by that King's grandson, the former Kaiser, who in turn has been thrown overboard by Fate, by the German people and by the big war.

According to Galton, the genius of the male side is inherited through the daughters. Perhaps this little girl with the earnest look and good, strong legs, may be the mother of a great future Bismarck; perhaps little Ferdinand, with his finger in his mouth, very much like 100,000 other little German babies, will do the great work, whatever it may be.

It will interest young American mothers, and girls soon to be married, and mothers, to study the intelligent face of this young German wife.

The original Bismarck had no greatness back of HIM. The original Vanderbilt as he sat in his little rowboat, thinking about the new steam cars, had no great fortune or ability back of HIM.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a million of the world's great men are born of fathers and mothers unknown.

We wish great happiness to the young women, married or unmarried, that read the Sun-Telegraph. We hope that their faces always may be as happy as that of this young mother. And, above all, we wish them PLENTY OF CHILDREN and great joy in caring for them.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—This letter, postmarked Boston and signed merely "L," is appended herewith without change:

You may or may not recall meeting me at the dog track in Agua Caliente over two years ago. You were with Will Hogg and several others. In the grandstand that afternoon were Louella O. Parsons, Louise Groody, Ann Pennington, George Bancroft and Walter Catlett.

I remember trivial incidents because it was a portentious day in my life. For no reason at all before the sun slipped behind Mexican hills I embarked on a series of mis-adventures that no one who knows me could possibly believe. It is like a nightmare even now.

Yet what I tell you is true. I was on a motor trip to California with my husband, who was with me the afternoon I met you. We left our two children at La Jolla with friends. Our lives together had been ordinarily pleasant enough. While not overly happy I had hitherto been content.

In all the term implies I was a loyal wife and loved my children. After the races we went to the gambling room. Perhaps it will fix the day in your mind to recall the gentleman who removed his necktie and put on another he regarded as luckier. You and your wife were watching at his table.

That gentleman was my husband. Certainly it was nothing to be excited over. He had had a drink or so but our visit was purely a lark and he was wagering only small sums. Yet for no reason at all I became infuriated because I thought he was making himself ridiculous.

Without saying anything I left the room in a rage. I walked around awhile, went to my room expecting him to come. He didn't and at 7:30 I went back to the casino. He was still there with a pile of chips in front of him and tipsier than I ever saw him.

I do not drink but I went to the bar at the end of the room and ordered an old fashioned cocktail. A group of men and women were throwing dice nearby and asked me to join them. I did, had another drink—this time a martini.

* * *

They were organizing a sort of slumming party to drive into old Tia Juana and being angry I accepted their invitation to go with them. On my way out I glanced at my husband and that was the last time I saw him. Nor have I seen my children since.

The details of that evening are considerably blurred. On way to Tia Juana I sat in the back seat of one of the automobiles with a tipsy gentleman who tried to make love to me. I remember that and also vaguely of visiting various resorts and dance halls. I awakened the next morning in a cheap hotel, but my companion was a woman in the party. She told me I had passed out. Half sick and worried I rushed to Agua Caliente to my husband. He had gone. I took a jitney to San Diego, phoned him at La Jolla. At first he was relieved and then he called me a name over the phone that stung to the quick.

* * *

There are other details of no interest. My only intention was to remain in San Diego over night to allow him to cool. Not knowing a soul in San Diego I went back to Agua Caliente, picked up with my slumming crowd again for just one cocktail and as your Samuel Pepys says "so to bed." Instead, four days later I was in Chicago living with a man who was not my husband.

* * *

There was nothing I could do but drink and forget. Three letters and two telegrams to my husband were unanswered. A telephone call resulted in my being told "the party refuses to speak to you." All this indicates I have a cheap streak in me. Maybe I had but the thought of such a life as I have lived the past two years would have been hideous before that day in Agua Caliente.

* * *

The woman I have developed to be doesn't matter. To my children I suppose I am dead. I understand they are in school in Switzerland. You may publish this some day if you like. It doesn't matter what day, for I will not be in this world to read it.

Note: The writer was in Agua Caliente at the time and recalls incidents mentioned in the letter.
